TAR DROPS

Monday was an especially cold day for June.

Mr. M. L. Hoyle has taken a position with the Franklin Times.

Their many friends are delighted to see Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Egerton, who are visiting their daughter, Mrs. J. B. Jones, in Louisburg and looking so well.

The many friends of Senator and Mrs. W. M. Person will learn with much regret that Mrs. Person fell while descending the steps at the Sir Walter hotel in Raleigh the past week, breaking the small bone in her left arm and otherwise suffering painful bruises. Sen. Person was in Louisburg yesterday and stated she was resting nicely.

MISS DOROTHY ROTH ENTER TAINS

Honoring Miss Naomi Ellsbery, of Raleigh, Miss Dorothy Roth entertained a number of little friends at a delightful Rook and Bridge party, on Tuesday evening, June 4th. At the conclusion of the game, it was found that Marguerite Tonkel and Edward Stovall held highest score.

Those enjoying Miss Roth's hospitality were Naomi Ellsbery, Billie Newell, Douglas Perry, Marguerite Tonkel, Mamie Davis Beam, Christine Collier and Edward Stovall. Delicious refreshments were served.

TAKING A MOVIE OF AN AFRICAN NATIVE BATTLE

Jack Templeton: A Lieutenant of the U. S. Army. Hal Paine: A close friend of Jack's. Sam Crawford: An enemy and rival of Hal and Jack. Frank Fager: Sam's chum and cronny.

Scene I. Near the Equator in the Belgian Congo River Basin near the village of Katalo. The feet composed of three native canoes and one motor boat was moving slowly up the river.

Jack: Let's fix our cameras and fill them with film for the coming battle. Oh, by the way, I just received some news of the coming battle. They are terrible fighters for the Red Pygmies are very savage.

Hal: I am beginning to feel shivers run up my back. We have twelve men and all have rifles except two and they can man the small machine gun in the motor-boat. I'll bet we will make those Reds-hop if they get after us.

Jack: Ha! Ha! We have a small battle ship.

Hal: Hark! Listen! Do you hear those tom-toms? They are coming. Shut off the motor and let's see if we can see them. Wow, what a mob of Reds.

Jack: (After they had passed) Oh boy, I'm glad I did not meet them in the path.

Scene II. A tree in a field where the battle is expected to come off.

Sam: We fooled them that time. We beat them to it.

Frank: We sure did. It is about time for the coming battle to be fought. I believe it is going to storm.

And after a while a terrible storm comes up and delays one tribe while the other advances steadily. Jack, Hal and their company gain a favorable position near the battle.

The other party tries to change their position and are caught, killed and made into soup for the Reds are cannibals.

Scene III. The Battle. Jack: I am putting this extra lens feature on. It is a kind you turn down and it looks like you are on the ground and looking into their faces.

Hal: I'll bet this film will make a big hit on Broadway and everywhere else it goes.

Jack: Here they come! The first line advances and recoils. The second line pushes forward with a shower of spears and arrows only to receive shower after shower. They are finally driven off leaving more than half of their number dead or dying on the battlefield.

Scene IV. Homeward bound. Jack: Oh boy, what a night. Hal: And how. Man, Man, those Reds are very good shots with a blow gun.

Jack: (As he swings the Eagle about and headed for the Suez Canal) Well here goes. Hal: I am sorry those guys got made into white man soup. I am going to try and get some missionaries to try and get those natives to be Christians.
