GET THE RAT AND SAVE MONEY

The filthy wharf rat as he is known in North Carolina is not one of the so-called necessary evils with which citizens are supposed to live in communal bliss but is a pest that can and should be exterminated.

The Norwegian rat can be eradicated successfully and his ravages checked by systematic and careful campaigns of extermination, says C. D. Schwartz, biologist of the United States Biological Survey, who is now working with the State College Extension Service. "During the colder months of the year, the rat congregates in buildings and it is at this time that his damage is more noticeable and when control campaigns may be more effectively conducted."

Mr. Schwartz is at present conducting a number of campaigns in several cities of the State to demonstrate how the rat may be controlled. In November, February and March, he has arranged campaigns in Durham, Winston-Salem and Salisbury. Follow-up work in eight other cities and towns will be done in December and January to study the results secured in campaigns already conducted.

Mr. Schwartz believes that the control of rats is a community affair and that if a comprehensive campaign of poisoning and trapping is put on, the rat population may be heavily reduced. Farmers lose considerable grain and other feedstuffs each winter by the ravages of this pest. Then too the rodent is a filthy animal, carrying disease germs and spoiling much food which he does not consume.

Any community wishing to conduct a rat campaign may secure facts from the biologist. In some cases, he would be available personally for handling the actual work. Mr. Schwartz says interest has been evinced in many communities in this work of eradication, and it is becoming one of the tasks of cities and health departments in improving sanitary and economic conditions.

Beaufort County farmers are planning to organize a county livestock association to promote the development of this industry on every farm of the county.

SPELLS OF BACKACHE

"I HAVE used Cardui at intervals for sixteen years, when I suffered from weakness, and it always helped me," says Mrs. J. W. Jimright, R. F. D. 2, Troy, Ala.

"Mostly I was afflicted with bad spells of backache. At times I felt as if my back would break. I would drag one foot after the other, in a helpless sort of a way, and once I got down in bed. My husband urged me to take Cardui, and I soon found what a fine medicine it really was."

"When my second child was little, I was in very bad health. I did not pick up as I should have. I was weak and sickly. I do not believe that I would have come through, but for Cardui."
