Printing That Gets Attention

A large bulk of the mail that the postman delivers goes into the waste basket unread. The kind that meets this fate is the kind that fails to "catch the eye." It does not lure the reader.

Printing with a Pull for salt." Newell—"That's the stuff that makes potatoes taste bad when you boil 'em and don't put any in it."

Visitor (watching baseball game) "What's the score, boy?" Brad—"Forty two to nothin' and my side is in the field." Visitor—"Is your side losing?" Brad—"Losing! Why, man alive, we haven't bent to bat yet!"

"J. C." said his aunt, "did you enjoy the book I sent you on your birthday?" "Haven't looked at it yet." "Why, how is that?" "Mama said that I'd have to wash my hands when I read it."

"Russell," said his mother, "I hope you have been a quiet boy in school this afternoon." Russell—"That's what I was. I went to sleep right after lunch and the teacher said she'd whip any boy in the room who woke me up."

Clarence—"Did your watch stop when it dropped on the floor?" William Parrish—"Sure. Did you think it would go on through?"

"Here boy," said the wealthy motorist, "I want some gasoline and please get a move on! You never get anywhere in the world unless you push. Push is essential. When I was young I pushed and that is what got me where I am."

Clayton—"Well, gov'nor, I reckon you'll have to push again, 'cause there aint a drop of gas on the place." "Aw," said Elmo, "you're afraid to fight." "No, I'm not," protested Leon, "but if I fight ma'll find out and lick me." "How'll she know?" "She'll see the doctor going to your house."

KAUPP GIVES PROGRAM FOR POULTRY COURSE

The eight annual poultry short course for farmers, farm women and commercial poultrymen of North Carolina to be held at State College during the week of November 18 to 23 will be well attended, according to present indications.

Dr. B. F. Kaupp, head of the poultry department and in charge of the short course, says that he has received a number of inquiries within the last few days. The course will consist of three one-hour lectures each morning during the week followed by a laboratory period each afternoon. Instruction will cover such important matters as judging for egg production, hatching, brooding, production of broilers, growing out pullets for winter egg production and other features. Considerable attention will be given to sanitation and disease prevention. Visits will be made to nearby farm and commercial plants and those who attend will have the opportunity of working in the laboratories and at the College poultry plant.

In addition to Dr. Kaupp, Dr. William Moore, state veterinarian will be on the program. C. F. Parrish poultry extension specialist; R. S. Dearstyn, disease investigator; W. F. Armstrong, associate professor of poultry husbandry; L. C. Salter, poultry marketing specialist; and assistants Poley, Greaves, Gauger and Fournie will have charge of different parts of the short course.

It is pointed out that women as well as men are invited to attend. Dr. Kaupp says that rooms may be obtained near the campus for $1 a night and that meals at the college cafeteria are low in price.

It is planned to hold a meeting of the North Carolina Poultry Association during the week. Another feature will be the judging contest on Saturday morning, November 23. The successful competitor in this contest will be awarded a silver trophy cup.

By growing turkeys on land where poultry had not been confined, Mrs. E. E. McRae of Anson County made a success of the venture this season.

More than 300 bushels of beardless barley has been planted in Montgomery county this fall. The supply of seed was not equal to the demand.
