OUR RALEIGH LETTER

By M. L. Shipman

Raleigh, July 7.—The North Carolina Democracy has experienced many larger, and more enthusiastic conventions than that of last Thursday, but none in which harmony and good will were more apparent. The slate of proposed nominees had been decided by a few of the "old heads" who gathered the meeting with their presence. The Governor, Governor Gardner and Bailey were present with a representative and made the speech of the occasion, presenting a record of democratic accomplishments in North Carolina to which everyone might "point with pride." Former Congressman Claude Kitchin, of Scotland Neck, responded to repeated calls and made a rousing talk urging the voters of the Democratic party and pledging for it a great victory in November. A. L. Brooks, of Greensboro, also contributed his bit to the enthusiasm and laughed at the appeals which greet the eloquent appeals of Democracy who preceded him. The convention was free of quarrels or any pyrotechnics. Everyone who understood a desire to talk was allowed to proceed. Just a good old family reunion at which everybody felt at home.

Criticism was expected as to why no man were heaped upon President Hoover. Each of the speakers paid his respects to the Republican party, but the President was the chief target of practically all the talking. He was charged with having made promises to the east during the campaign of 1928 and "broken them to the hope" in 1930. The convention applauded as the speakers voiced the failure of the President to enforce the prohibition laws, to create measures of relief, to provide means for the employment of surplus labor and to abolish poverty, in accordance with promises made to the American people while the campaign for the presidency was in progress two years ago. Convention orators were in unanimous agreement that the utter failure of the Republican administration to redeem its pledges to the people presages a sweeping Democratic victory throughout the country this year and North Carolina is leading the way with a ground 100,000 majority for Josiah W. Bailey, Senator-elect. The North and South congressional districts are also expected to be carried in the fold on March 4, 1931, according to convention predictions.

The prolonged session of the platform committee, in which there was division over proposed planks to declare for a referendum on the 18th amendment, held the convention to a late hour in the afternoon. All differences were settled in committee and no minority proposal being presented the report was adopted by a unanimous vote of the convention shortly before adjournment.

The platform pledges a continuance of economical government by the present administration of North Carolina's Senators and Representatives in Congress, the administration of Governor Gardner and his Live-at-Home program, urges a continuance of the policy of eliminating the burden of maintaining public roads, recommends an extension of State prisoners in light work, reiterates the party's position in the State on prohibition and calls for any needed legislation for the enforcement of liquor laws, asks for continuing support to the fight for equal freight rates, commends the party's effective work for public health, commends increases in assessed valuations and physical detectives, reaffirms its faith in and support of public education, approves the Great Smoky Mountain National Park project and appeals for loyalty and unity in the approaching contest with the Republican party. On the subject of taxation the platform declares that: The Democratic party has always denounced oppression and unjust taxation and declares that taxation is a burden to be borne by those made capable and most able to bear it and opposes any system which shifts the burden of taxation from the shoulders of those able to pay to those unable to pay. It is against double taxation and declares that double taxation is evident
