Washington Was The Father Of West Point

His Dream of a Great Military Academy Will be Fully Realized in 1932

Another project dear to George Washington will take on final form with the addition of 15,000 acres of land to the reservation of the United States Military Academy at West Point, thus rounding out the scope of the school as Washington desired it to be. The dedication of this additional land, it has been learned by the Division of Information and Publication of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission, has been most appropriately set for next year, 1932, the Two Hundredth Anniversary of Washington's birth.

Probably no military locality figured more often than West Point in Washington's mind during the War for Independence. He early had seen the importance of the Hudson River. Control of that waterway by the enemy would have cut the Thirteen warring Colonies in two. Command of the river by the patriots meant dominance of the military situation and was necessary to victory in the war. And West Point was the key position on the river.

In full appreciation of this fact, Kosciuszko was commissioned in 1778 to plan fortifications for West Point that would make it "the Gibraltar of the Hudson."

Washington, however, saw in West Point a utility to his army beyond its immediate strategic importance. None knew better than the commanding general the scarcity of well-trained officers in his ranks, and the situation of West Point seems to have impressed him even then as a good one for the establishment of the needed military school.

On Washington's recommendation, Congress appointed a committee to draw up plans for such a school and in 1777 a corps of officers not able to perform field service was organized in Philadelphia. In 1781 this body was sent to West Point "to serve as a military school for young gentlemen previously to their being appointed to marching regiments."

Congress had thus found time to act upon Washington's idea, and such were the beginnings of West Point. Three rough buildings had been erected, to house a library, an engineers' school, and a laboratory. Preliminary practice in gunnery also was set up. That Washington had in mind the future development of West Point is shown by the fact that at Newburgh, in 1783, he laid before his generals further plans for a more extensive academy there, for artillerymen, engineers, and cadets. But not until after the War, when he was President, had he the time or the authority to give effect to his ideas.

In 1794, during his Administration, he recommended to Congress suggestions for upbuilding of a school for thorough and complete military training at West Point. The School was not without its vicissitudes, however. A fire destroyed what Congress had already accomplished and the academy, as it then was, was wiped out and forgotten for six years.

Still, Washington's idea survived, and in 1802 President Jefferson took up the plan and rebuilt West Point. True to his own sense of the fitness of things, President Jefferson saw to it that July Fourth should be the date of reopening. On that day West Point, as we know it today got down to its work with an enrollment of ten cadets. Since then nothing has impeded its work but cramped quarters and not always ample appropriations.

Certainly the American people have never lacked interest in West Point. Each year it is visited by more persons than any other Government military undertaking. Now the seventy-first Congress has authorized a move long indicated and urged, in order to carry out Washington's original purpose. General Washington had placed training in gunnery foremost in its teaching. At last, with 15,000 acres of additional land, the Academy is to have this needed artillery range, and also a training field for aviation. And no one will question the fitness of opening this new and larger West Point during the year when the nation pays its homage to Washington.

AT REST

A dark gloom was cast upon the entire community, when it was learned that death had entered into the home of W. H. Burgess, and took the loving mother and grandmother, Mrs. Bettie Ayacue. The deceased leaves three children, fifteen grandchildren, two great-grandchildren and one sister.

Grandmother had been in a bad state of health for several years, but we had hoped that she would get better, for we could hardly bear to think of her leaving us, but our hopes crumbled Thursday, March 19, about 2 o'clock when God led into that beautiful kingdom, where she will live forever.

The funeral services were conducted Friday evening at Liberty Christian Church by Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, where there were a large number of relatives and friends present to pay their last tribute of respect. She was tenderly laid to rest beneath the bountiful supply of beautiful flowers beside her husband who had preceded her to the grave thirty-eight years.

Grandmother will be sadly missed by her friends and relatives who loved her so dearly.

Arbor and Bird Day

Friday afternoon, March 28, was celebrated as Arbor and Bird Day in the Youngsville high school. The senior class presented a very appropriate program. This program consisted of the history and future of the American forest. The wild life was stressed. The student body was warned to guard the great enemy—fire, and take upon themselves the responsibility to see that trees are protected against this dreadful foe. After the program ended maple trees were set on the school ground to beautify the yard and offer shelter for the birds that we love to have visit us. Several beautiful Arbor Day poems were recited after the trees were planted.

We were very fortunate to have with us at this time Mr. Claridge from the State Department of Conservation and Development. He pointed out the danger to the American forest through ignorance. This ignorance consists of the false notion of destroying insects by burning the woods every year; burning the woods to destroy the boll weevil when the boll weevil does not live in the woods at all. China was pointed out as a country that burned the forest to rid themselves of vermin and suffered greatly for their mistake.

Monarch Tires and Tubes

DIRECT TO THE CONSUMER—AT FACTORY PRICES! UNLIMITED GUARANTEE. MONARCH ADMIRAL TIRES are the equal in quality to any standard first line tire. MONARCH SUPER CONSTRUCTION is the equal to any tire made. Both carry UNLIMITED GUARANTEES as to TIME and MILEAGE, far superior to the yearly guarantee which we will also issue if desired. Call for explanation of difference. All Factories are making some good tires but usually make three or four grades, and the retailer often quotes in his advertisement the prices on the lower grades. Some don't have the Manufacturer's name on them. There is a Reason.

The Monarch Rubber Co. is beating competition in price by selling to the car owner direct through the Wholesale Grocers, with no extra rent, clerk hire, traveling salesman, Branch Warehouse expense nor National High Cost advertisement to pay and passing this saving in price to the consumer.

We have taken this Agency for Franklin County as a side line to our Wholesale Grocery business.
