Tobacco Production Increased

Production of flue-cured tobacco in the United States more than doubled since 1921, according to government estimates. Flue-cured tobacco is used chiefly in the manufacture of cigarettes and the gain in production of this type of tobacco is the result of the increasing numbers of men and women who are reaching for cigarettes. The ever-growing popularity of the cigarette is attributed by authorities in the industry to the fact that people are paying more attention to their Adam's apples and are using cigarettes from which certain harsh irritants present in all tobaccos have been removed by modern methods of manufacture such as the toasting process including the use of ultra violet rays. According to government records, production of flue-cured tobacco last year amounted to more than 870,000,000 pounds as compared with only 372,000,000 lbs. in 1921. Production in 1930 set a new record for flue-cured tobacco, the next largest being about 750,000,000 pounds in 1929.
