The Tubercular Test
Last week there was conducted by the State Board of Health the tubercular test in our school. The doctor and nurse came Tuesday to give the test. They returned Thursday to determine the reactions. It was very fortunate that only a small and give him a ride."

As Millie drove away is her car her thoughts were filled with her gexperience with the stranger by the normal control of the stranger

She slowed down the car and as iit came to a halt the stranger limped to it and said, "When I first saw your car I didn't notice that it was driven by a lady and alone or I wouldn't have signalled. I have an same as my brother sometimes gets.' "You have a brother in college?" inquired the stranger.

"Yes, in Middlebury College." "That's where I'm attending college," he said. I am taking a few days off to visit my mother who is sick."

Then you probably know brother, Fred Wadsworth."
"I should say I do, he's my chum."

"Your chum! then you must be Willis Parmeter." "That's me. So you are Fred's

"Yes, Millie Wadsworth."
"I've heard Fred talk so much about you I feel as though I had known you all my life." he said.
"You don't look a bit as I expected from what Fred has written about you." said Millia said Millie.

"I think written descriptions often prove that way. I hope you are not disappointed in me." "I didn't mean that but you look different, that is all."

He changed the subject and soon proved himself such an entertaining conversationist that they were entering the town where she lived be-fore she realized it.

fore she realized it.
"This is where I live," said Milliee. "If dad was home I know he would insist that you spend the night with us so that he could talk.

so guess I'll have to find some place to stay till tomorrow, when perhaps I'll find some one to help me along. You see I havn't any money to pay bus fare with. If I had a blank check and some one to endorse it I could write a check on my home bank and get some money to help me out."

"Let me see if I haven't a blank check in my purse," said Millie. "If so, I have a little money and you can write the check and I can endorse and cash it for you. Yes here is one," she said as looked in her purse, "and I have twenty-five dol-lars. Will that be enough for you?"
"Yes, that will do very well," he said as he took the check and made and as he took the check and made it out and took the money. "I cer-tainly do thank you. Now I'll be able to get a bite to eat and a place to stay and perhaps a more present-able suit of clothes."

"I am going to start early in the morning to visit a friend about thirty miles from here and will be glad to have you go along with me," said

"That will be a great help," said "When and where shall I meet "At the corner here at 7 o'clock." The next morning at the appoint-time Millie found him waiting at the corner when she drove around. Quartet—Decimo Gaye, alto, Grady His appearance was improved by a Ray, tenor; Leslie Cooke, soprano; Bruce White, bass, sung two numpolitely and was about to step in the car when two men wearing officer's badges came forward and took hold of him and one of them said, "Well, Jim, you have eluded us for some time, but we have caught you at last."

"What does this mean," exclaimed

Millie in dismay.
"It means that we are going to take this man back to the peniten-tiary with us."

'There must be some mistake. He is Willis Parmeter, my brother's college chum."

"I don't know anything about who your brother's college chums are, but this fellow is Jim Winslow, alias, James Winter, an escaped convict whom we have been chasing for sometime."

"Sargent, keep him covered with your revolver till I get these handcuffs on him, as we don't want to take any chances on his making a break and getting away."

"I guess the jig is up and I'll have to take my medicine," said the prisoner. "I'll say I'm really sorry, Miss Wadsworth, that I got you mixed up in this affair, but my brief ac-quaintance with you is the only quaintance with you is the only pleasure I've had or likely to have in a long time. The check that I wrote is no good, but here is the money you let me have."

did you know my brother?' asked Millie.

"I never knew him, but led you "I never knew him, but led you to talk about him, tell me his name and made you believe I was his chum. All I told you about being attacked and robbed and getting my ankle hurt was just to get your sympathy and assistance. The first suit I had on was one I swiped to exchange for my prison clothes, and this suit I swiped from a clothing store last night."

As the officers started off with their prisoner, the chief turned and

Eighth Grade Beautifies Home Room
The eighth grade students have bought three new pictures to make their home room more attractive.
They are planning to buy some wall vases for flowers, and several students are going to bring some pot-ted plants. They feel that a more home like atmosphere, created by these little additions, will make them enjoy their work in school much better.

Basket Ball
The boys who are interested in basket ball began their practice on Monday of this week. Mr. O'Quinn is the boys coach. He has been the coach for the last few years, and the boys have certainly played well under his instruction. We expect to have a good team this year and fight for first place. Boys you can win for first place. Boys, you can win first place, so come on! nothing like trying.

The girls have not as yet begun their practice, but they intend to right away. Miss Fuller will coach. She was the coach for girls last year. with you about brother."

"I thank you," he said. "I am and we had a good team. All right, anxious to get home but I can't go any further tonight with this ankle, year.

News From the Grades
The first grade has just completed a farm project consisting of a barn, made of cardboard and the different farm animals cut and past-ed on cardboard. This is a very intelligent and enthusiastic group of small students. They put forth every effort to make their project the best possible.

There was not any news of inter-est in the other grades except the honor roll for the sixth and seventh Sixth grade: Pearl Harris, Mildred Mullen, Addie Paschall, Tyron Beddingfield.

Seventh grade: Merla Johnson.
