contracts to the growers.

Then followed the field work of interviewing individual growers, ascertaining how much bacco they have produced during the last three years, and getting their signatures on contracts.

Agents in a number of counties reported to E. Y. Floyd, tobacco specialist at State College, who is in charge of the sign-up drive, that every grower of consequence will be under contract before the drive is closed. Mr. Floyd's office has been busy checking over the numerous contracts sent here for approval. Those approved will go on to Washington for signature by Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture.

Dean Schaub explained that before the reduction program has cut down the surplus leaf and brought prices to a higher level, the AAA has arranged to help the contract signers by giving them equalization payments of 20 per cent of the value of the weed they sold before the marketing holiday, and 10 per cent on that sold at-ter the holiday up to October 7 on bright leaf markets and up to October 28 on border belt markets. The rental payments will be $17.50 an acre for the land taken out of production, and the benefit payments next year will be 12 1-2 per cent of the 1934 crop's market value.
