The Booster and The Knocker

Nearly every town has two classes of citizens—the boosters and the knockers. All the world loves the former, but even the devil shuns the latter.

Be a booster!
 The town booster is known by everybody, for he is always doing and saying something to push his town and its people along. He is the man who makes the town. The knocker is the one who destroys it.

Be a booster!
 The booster never loses anything by his boosting. He boosts other people and other people boost him, and through this combination of boosting great things are accomplished. It is only the knocker who fails of his own weight, of his own words, of his own deeds.

Be a booster!
 The booster is like a ray of sunshine on a cloudy day. He brightens everything and everybody around him. His geniality, his cheerfulness, his energy and his good deeds breed hope in the bosom of despair. His words and his acts aid others and ennoble himself. But the knocker only kills—just kills, kills, kills!

Be a booster!
 This town has many boosters, and you all know them, you admire them, you respect them. And your respect is more precious to the genuine booster than is your money. It is only the knocker who stands alone, without friends, without hope for the future.

Courtesy In Traffic Parking

If every motorist would unite with all others in working out the parking problems, no drastic measures would be required and no hardships endured by anyone. We should be a committee of one to solve and regulate the traffic condition.

There is nothing in motoring that deserves more attention, as the problem to which it relates becomes more complex, than that of parking in such a way as to conserve the greatest amount of space and to be careful of damage to other cars.

Slovenly parking is a mark of selfishness that is getting to be more and more emphatic as the motor car comes into greater and greater use. There is little excuse for it under many circumstances. It may take more time to drive into a space in such a way as to use no more of it than is absolutely necessary, but certainly it is time well spent. The parking hog is becoming even more common and more of a nuisance than the road hog.

Another disgusting and unfair practice in parking and in leaving parking spaces is the habit of some motorist in bumping cars in front and rear of them to make more room for exit or entrance. Fenders, bumpers, tail lights and other parts of the cars that are bumped, suffer, and the owners are caused expense and trouble in repairing. Such disrespect for the property of others reveals the true character of the offender.

In every community, and this one is no exception, there is room for improvement in parking courtesy, and if every auto driver respected the rights and the property of others, there would be no demand for regulation of parking.

No Closed Season For Clean-Ups

Millions of American home owners and others in thousands of communities, have been up to their elbows in soap and water and in other methods of clean-up during the past few weeks. Many are still at it. As usual the spring time of the year is the time when clean-up is stressed. This is all well and good but many are inclined to almost over-do the cleaning in spring time and neglect it the remainder of the year.

There should be no closed season for clean-up. We need cleanliness in December just as much as we do in May. Cleanliness about the premises of one's property is necessary for good appearance. Cleanliness inside the home is paramount to good health.

Fall and winter months are the breeding months of the germs of respiratory diseases that gain powerful impetus by the letting down of cleanliness standards. An unclean towel, an unsterile eating dish or utensil, accumulated dust and other undesirable conditions promote ill health and disease.

Our best protection of health and well being is cleanliness. Let's carry the clean-up spirit that begins with spring throughout the entire year.

The good parties are the ones you miss.

Which Kind Are You?

Every citizen should be actively interested in community betterment—first, for the good of the community and second, on the theory that what benefits the community is of equal benefit to the individual.

Some people are aggressive and work continually for the welfare of the community in which they live. Some hold back through modesty, some through timidity, and others through a disinclination to "neglect their private affairs."

The modest man is respected, although it is to be regretted that his modesty keeps him so much in the background.

The man who is timid is to be pitied, for his timidity is a serious handicap that happily, is often overcome.

The modest man and the timid man should assert themselves. The community needs their efforts, just as it receives the cooperation of their more aggressive friends and neighbors.

But what of the citizen who is adverse to "neglecting his private affairs?"

Is he the kind of man who makes a community, or is he merely one who profits from the community that others make?

The man who is "too busy with his own private affairs" to aid in community betterment may be possessed of many of the good qualities usually found in mankind. He may be highly respected by his neighbors, and his honesty and integrity may be beyond question.

But no community can thrive on neighborly respect, and honesty and integrity alone. Aggressiveness is required if a community would not slip backward instead of pressing forward.

Every man owes a duty to the community in which he lives, and that duty should be performed, even though it entails an occasional personal sacrifice.

No man should consider himself "too busy with his own private affairs" to aid in community betterment. He should not expect others to do all of the community work while he reaps his share of the benefits.

He should respond in kind.

Nothing is done artistically until all suggestion of hard work has been eliminated.

Housework is quickly reduced to a science when a woman gets interested in bridge.

One nice thing about the income tax is that they can't take anything unless you make something.

"Bargains" produced at the expense of human misery are nothing short of wolves in sheep's clothing.

Why do organized minorities run things? Simply because the majority has not sense enough to organize.

Every husband wonders what his wife does with all the money he brings home, and every wife wonders why her husband isn't able to bring home more money.

Honesty needs no change to keep up with changing conditions.

At least, we didn't have to contend with strikes during the depression.

In light of his former dealings, Mr. Insull's $200,000 bond should be only pocket change to him.

Modern bad men count victims by notches on their fenders.

People who lead the procession have a habit of not looking back.

After all is said and done, nothing will push you ahead like a good plain day's work.

It's a paradox that we are weakest when we think we are strongest.

When you come home and find the parlor on the front porch, you know that spring cleaning has arrived.

The best community progress is made with team work, which means pulling forward, not backward.

A boss in the home is wrong, says an authority on health and beauty, but if that's the case, who is to decide who will mow the lawn?

There are five million people classed as illiterates in this country and a lot of them seem to be holding public office.

When folks criticize you for the things you haven't done or said, you may feel secure in the fact that your words and deeds have not been open to criticism.
