ST. PAUL'S EPISCOPAL CHURCH (By Rev. Frank E. Pulley)

"For the bed is shorter than that a man can stretch himself on it; and the covering narrower than that he can wrap himself in it." Isaiah 28:20.

The leading statesmen of Israel's day are urging the people to sign up with Assyria and Egypt in a "foreign alliance" for military protection. Isaiah does not agree with them. He says that Judah can make herself stronger only by returning to a strong faith in Jehovah, absolutely relying upon God in all crises.

By the somewhat humorous mental picture of a man trying to go to sleep on a bed too short for him and to wrap himself in a covering too narrow for him, Isaiah is illustrating a man trying to live by a short-sighted and Godless way of life.

Recently in California a woman put this question to eight boys: "If you were an aviator, about to take part in an air race, the winning of which would bring you a large prize and much glory; and if by accident you discovered unguarded the plane belonging to your closest rival, the person most likely to beat you in the race, would you damage that person's plane so that you could not compete with your's? If not, why not?"

Four of the boys said they would damage the plane. Two said they would not but only because they were afraid of getting caught, and the other two dodged the question.

A teacher in a Baltimore girls' school put the same question to sixteen girls. The girls had had religious education, while the boys had not. Every one of the sixteen girls answered "No."

True, one or two of them showed mere fear of detection, as for instance one who said: "No, it's not right. You would get put in jail." A typical answer, however, of the girls: "No, because one's life means more than money, fame, and glory."

I do not believe the girls showed up so well because they have higher ethical values than boys, but mainly because their parents, and Sunday School teachers, had taught them honesty and the sanctity of a human life. The boys would have done just as well if they had had religious education. Among unchurched youth today there is a lack of appreciation of the value of human life. Like Isaiah's text, any philosophy of life which excludes honesty and reverence for people's lives, is indeed a "bed too short for a man to stretch himself on it, and a covering too narrow to wrap himself in it."

The Biography of the Nazarene shows His feelings on the subject. "But who so shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea." The doctor who exerts himself to the utmost to save some injured wretches (we call him), gets his idea that every life is infinitely precious, not from his science, or nature, or evolution, but from Christ. As for honesty, look at the "rewards" Christ offered His prospective followers. Floggings, betrayals, hatred, exile, poverty.

More than any other one thing needed today in our hour of transition, are homes in which there is a stronger emphasis upon Godly living. More of us must declare "as for me and my house, we will worship the Lord." Or say with Solomon, "Better is a dinner of herbs where love is, than a stalled ox and hatred therewith."

The immortal Twenty Third Psalm could never have been written by a man who thought of God only in the synagogue on the Sabbath. His canvas is the great out-doors where he followed his humble occupation of minding sheep, and back of the lyrical poetry of the Psalm there are the eternal verities, the sure foundation-stone of confidence.

How seldom do we find today such a note of confidence as David strikes three times in those brief verses: "I shall not wait," telling of his utter confidence in God's ability to provide all necessities. "I will fear no evil," because David knows he has consecrated every ounce of his body and soul to the service of the King, and that the King will guard him from the wolves which slay sheep as well as those which slay souls. And "I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever," showing quiet faith not only for today but for eternity. He has weighed all other ways and found them inadequate. What a contrast there is in this great hymn of peace and strength to Isaiah's parable of a man tumbling and tossing around upon an unsatisfying course of life, trying vainly to cover himself with a covering too narrow to fill his needs of a loving, eternal God.

SURPRISE BIRTHDAY DINNER

On Saturday, July 28, 1934, the children and little grandchild and relatives of Mr. W. T. Gupton, gathered at his home in White Level community in honor of his 62nd birthday, although Friday, July 27th was his birthday. All arrived about 11:30 o'clock, and about 12 o'clock the dinner was spread and served under the shady oak in the yard. The dinner consisted of barbecue, chicken, corn puddings, pies, cake and pickle and lots of other good things to eat. The birthday cake was decorated with 62 candles. In the afternoon ice cream, grape juice and lemonade was served. Mr. Gupton greatly enjoyed this surprise on the part of his relatives and they departed about 6 o'clock wishing him many more happy birthdays. Reported.

HINTS FOR THE HOME by NANCY HART

Grease stains may be removed from leather most easily with either benzine or pure turpentine.

Line the baking pan with parchment paper when you are baking fish and you'll find the pan will be much easier to wash.

When you're scrambling eggs, add a few bread crumbs in the mixing. It changes the flavor a bit and it makes the eggs go much further.

Separating eggs is a simple matter when you break them into a small funnel held over a cup or a glass. The whites go through, of course, leaving the unbroken yolks at top.

Avoid chipping and nicking delicate china in the dishpan by covering the bottom of the pan with a thick Turkish towel folded to fit.

An excellent cover for the ironing board may be made of old white window shades that have been washed and ironed. They do not burn readily and they're strong and durable.

Dull oilcloth may be brightened up easily with equal parts of turpentine and milk.

Add a little vinegar to the water in cleaning linoleum and it will dry unusually bright and shiny.

To clean coral beads, dip them in a solution of one teaspoonful of borax to a pint of warm water. When they are clean rinse with tepid, clean water.

To clean ink-stains from linen without damaging the fabric, dip the linen in milk and let it stand for two hours. Then wash the linen with a pure soap while the milk is on the spots. This method is almost always successful.

Before you polish dirty furniture, rub it with hot water and dry it immediately. Then when you polish it, the wood will take a high luster and won't show finger marks.
