Crop Rotation

(County Agent)

On Thursday February 26, Mr. E. C. Blair, State Agronomist, visited five farmers in Franklin County, and discussed crop rotations with them. He requested farmers in the County to combine many of their small fields into from three to six large fields, and alternate them with the following three crops, cotton, corn and grain. This system will give the farmers an opportunity to continue improving the farm by having a cover crop to plow under once out of every three years. He recommended that the county increase the broadcast grain crops to control erosion on the steep hillsides. He left the tobacco land out of the crop rotation where a different rotation system was desired by the farmers where tobacco was to be grown. The following is a list of the farmers visited: A. T. Howell, T. W. Boone, T. H. Weldon, J. D. Newman, and H. F. Mitchell. These farmers are cooperating in rotation work either with the extension service or the soil conservation service or both.

The week of February 24 was the first week in Franklin County since the week of December 9, in which we did not have rain or snow. During this week practically all tobacco plant beds were sown. With warm sunny weather and good wind the soil has dried out and some farm plowing has begun, it being the first time since the week of December 9 that work could be done in the field.

The terracing outfit began work Saturday. This was the first time since the week of December 9. Requests for work are far in excess of available time in which to do it. If the demand continues to increase, an additional outfit will be essential to meet the demands.

Strawberries look promising in Columbus County and the growers have begun to fertilize and mulch their plants.

"How much tobacco will North Carolina farmers plant and harvest this season with normal weather conditions and no control program," is the question many county planning committees are debating now.

Top-dress all small grain with at least 100 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre early in March, advise extension workers at State College.

MULES! MULES!

TO THE FARMERS OF FRANKLIN AND ADJOINING COUNTIES

In fact, my old customers and their sons! After an absence of 17 years, I have decided to go back in the Mule business in Louisburg. I have rented the warehouse next to the picture show, in front of the Postoffice. Expect to carry 50 head of Mules and Horses, sound, young, fit, broke and ready to go. Every one sold under a guarantee. Terms, which is the milk in the coconut, Cash, or half Cash. I have bought a brand new truck and will deliver them anywhere within 40 or 50 miles. Mr. Edward Southall is my representative and will be in charge of these stables, as I will not be there all the time, owing to other interests. Any and all trades he makes guaranteed by me. Will appreciate a visit, if you will look these mules and horses over, which are expected to arrive some time during next week and if you need any, buy before they are picked over.
