As one who has traveled considerably, and at all times urged others to travel, it is a source of vastly different. His understanding of national and international problems, gained through travel, was one of the arguments used in his favor when he was first mentioned for the Presidency. Its advantage has been amply demonstrated from time to Presidency. Its advantage has been amply demonstrated from time to time as he has been forced to advantage ous to particular sections, but were designed to help the country as a whole. No one questioned the sincerity of the President because they knew that he had first-hand knowledge of ture to soothe and heal the inflamed he had first-hand knowledge of the actual effect of the legislation he advocated.

In reading the President's Cleveland address, one paragraph stood out. It was with reference to the advice that the Chief Executive had once given a young friend. In the words of the President, he said: "Take a second-hand car, put on a flannel shirt, drive out to the Coast by the northern route and come back by the southern route. Bon't talk to the southern route. Don't talk to your banking friends or your Chamber of Commerce friends, but specialize on the gasoline station man, the small restaurant keeper and the farmers you meet by the wayside and your farmers. by the wayside and your fellow automobile travelers."

automobile travelers."

That paragraph made an impression because I had done just that. Two years ago, traveling by trailer, I had covered the route the President had suggested and had talked with the people he identified. The benefits gained cannot be adequately expressed in understandable terms. in understandable terms.

Naturally, when the President of the United States urges the American people to something which an individual has long ad-vocated, that individual must be pardoned for finding it a great source of personal satisfaction— such as that I now find.

At the risk of injecting a personal note into this column, I would like to say that it is most gratifying to find the Chief Executive of the United States stressing a point that I have often made.

IF YOUR PRODUCT IS SOLD NATIONALLY

It Can Be Sold In This Community

Come on! Let's do the town!

Across the street from that filling station (selling a national brand of gas) is a big food market. Shelf after shelf of national brands-cereals, canned goods, specialties, biscuits, coffee, tea, California oranges, Florida grapefruit-everything!

Next door an auto sales-room displays a popular make of car. Up the block, across from a movie, a hardware merchant shows a window of radios and refrigerators-all national makes. A tobacco shop sells nationally advertised cigarettes, drug stores sell national drugs, beauty shops recommend nation-known cosmetics.

A thriving, busy, nationally-minded community of people who are well dressed, prosperous—eager to buy. They know values—products. Why? They read their local community newspaper and heed the advertisements listed in its columns.

If your product is sold nationally it can be sold in this community. And the best way to sell it is to advertise it in this local community newspaper reaching a majority of the substantial families, reaching them consistently, week-after-week, in their homes.
