EDITORIAL

Lets all pull for the meat curing storage and packing plant and canning plant. We don't know of anything that would be of as much value to the county as this.

The question many people in North Carolina would like to have answered is "Why did Congressmen Umstead and Lambeth refuse to run for re-election?" There is bound to be some good reason and the public would like to know what it is.

Now that Louisburg has a fairly good force of WPA workers it should develop and build at least one other outlet from town in each direction. If anything should happen that either of the outlets at present could not be used then the town would be shut out to and bottled up in that direction. This condition ought to be corrected.

POLITICALLY

Since our last issue politics in Franklin County has been the chief topic of conversation wherever a number happened to get together. Also since our last issue other rumors have found their way to the TIMES office, which seems to add interest to the momentum the present campaign is entering.

His many friends say the TIMES failed to name the strongest candidate for Recorder, this being the present Vice-Recorder, E. C. Bulluck. He is a promising young attorney and is popular among a host of friends who will be glad to "shell the woods" for him. But this does not check the division of interest, Hamilton H. Hobgood, one of the State's most heralded young orators, and himself a popular young man of a splendid legal mind, although not yet a member of the bar, is entering the race, if the rumors are true. He also will have to be counted in the running. Likewise James L. Palmer, possibly the most familiar person in Franklin County with the Court records, procedure and laws, not to be a lawyer is not to be discounted as he is very much in the race, and with the bug singing merrily in the ears of at least three more, others may enter before the "first heat" is run.

Those who are keeping in close touch with the proposed candidates may add the names of J. K. Tharrington, of Youngsville, to the list of would-be Auditors, if rumors are to be credited. Mr. Tharrington is a fine young man and a splendid accountant and is at present holding a most important position with the First-Citizens Bank and Trust Co. Another suggestion is Wallace Green, of Franklinton, one of the County's most popular young men and efficient accountants in the county.

It has been suggested why can't Franklin send a lady to the House of Representatives to represent it. Mrs. Ben T. Holden has been selected as the proper one. She is capable, energetic, very popular, a hardworker and a very Strong Democrat, besides being an exceptionally fine business woman.

Possibly the most interesting piece of political news comes from Cedar Rock and states that Taylor W. Boone, popular Chairman of Franklin's Board of County Commissioners, is considering relinquishing his present post and running for Sheriff. Such reports have been circulated in former campaigns, but may terminate in this one. In the event Mr. Boone decides not to run for Commissioner, according to this report, James J. Lancaster is expected to enter the race for Mr. Boone's place on the Board. This happens to be the first indication of any interest asserting itself in regard to the attitude of the public to the Commissionerships. Since this rumor begun to float about it was ascertained that Dunns township expected to return its present member of the Board, John M. Stallings, in whom they are well pleased. It is stated that the political bee is singing around Harvey Bartholomew, who is considering entering the race for member of the Board of County Commissioners from the 5th district, composed of Louisburg and Cypress Creek townships. Harvey is one of Louisburg's leading young business men and is no doubt well fitted for the place.

ENFORCE TRAFFIC LAWS

One of the obstacles in the way of enforcement of laws against reckless automobile driving is the practice of "ticket-fixing." In large cities and small communities alike there has grown up a practice of letting off violators of the traffic laws with a suspended sentence, provided the offender has political pull or other influence.

The dreadful annual toll of motor fatalities will never be checked unless the laws against excessive speeding and reckless and drunken driving are rigidly enforced. It is disheartening to those charged with enforcing the traffic laws to make an arrest or serve a summons on a motorist, only to have the charge dismissed or sentence suspended, because of "pull."

New York City started a year ago to reform this practice. The imposition of fines for traffic violations was made compulsory on magistrates, who could no longer suspend sentences. One result has been to cut down the number of traffic accidents. Another has been to increase the city's revenues by nearly $750,000 a year, making the magistrates' court practically self-sustaining.
There is too much laxity in law-enforcement of all kinds in this country. There should be no leniency for wilful violators of the laws for safe driving.
