It will be pleasing to Tar Heels to know that Frank P. Graham of the University of North Carolina was a member of the Advisory Committee. Equally as pleasing is the sympathetic viewpoint of President Roosevelt toward rural school problems embodied in his message transmitting the report to the Congress.

Quotations from the Presidential message are timely. He said. "Rural America feels the pinch of ly every state, the adult group in ber of children to be educated, far fect the validity of other sections in excess of that carried by the or parts of sections of this title. adult group in urban areas. The heaviest load is borne by the rural farm population, with nearly twice the number of children in proportion to adults than is found in large cities."

At the present time, the Federal government makes grants to the states for vocational educational rehabilitation, along with assistance to land grant colleges. Under the Advisory Committee's suggestions, these would be retained with additional Federal grants for other purposes, including general aid to elementary and secondary education, improved preparation of teachers, construc- 3-4-1t tion of school buildings to facilitate district reorganization, aid in the administration of state departments of education, education service for adults and library service for rural areas.

It is significant that the Com-mittee proposes to make the authority of the state over the Federal ority of the state over the Federal pital experience, write. Mattie assistance funds so strong as to Sneed, R. 1. Kittrell, N. C. 3-4-2t give local authorities the right to say whether parochial and private held, however, that the major share of benefits should go to rural schools. In other words, if the Congress follows the advice contained in this important report, there will be a shift away from Federal control of education to more state and local control, where the views of parents can be voiced.

Another feature of the report is the recognition of the value of the Civilian Conservation Corps and the National Youth Administration as worthwhile projects in youth training.

It has long been recognized in Congress, particularly by those concerned with rural education. that some changes in Federal-grant policies are desirable. This is particularly true as regards the amount of funds to be made available. Certainly there should be agreement that there are no wiser expenditures of Federal funds than in the cause of education. particularly in equalizing rural and urban educational opportuni-
