

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Let's start in with some of the new parking rules. Cotton was worth 10 cents a pounds in Louisburg yesterday. Quite a bit of work has been done on the New Armory building.

The new stores next to Louisburg Theatre are nearing completion.

Louisburg was a pretty dead place Tuesday - everybody and then some were taking holiday.

Who says the Court Square doesn't look better without the heavy trees to hide the beauty and ruin the lawn.

His many friends were delighted to see Mr. H. J. Hayes, who has been quite ill, on our streets again the past week.

H. T. Bartholomew is having material placed on the old stable lot near the jail preparatory to erecting a modern garage and service station.

The town has done well towards paving its streets this year. It could add a block or two each year and soon reduce the cost of maintenance a great deal.

The new store room next to Louisburg Theatre is almost ready to accommodate the Theatre while a new and modern Theatre building is constructed on the present site.

It would be much better for the State Highway to go up Cedar Street than to be located near Fox Swamp, passing way round east of the town. It would at least provide another bridge, even though it would be out of town.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Bashford, of Raleigh, announce the birth of a daughter, Hazel Imogene, on Wednesday, June 14, at a local hospital. Mrs. Bashford was formerly Miss Zeda Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Jones, of Bunn.

The editor is very much indebted to Mr. and Mrs. John H. Wheeler for a nice lot of fine tomatoes. Mr. Wheeler states he has been eating tomatoes out of his garden since June 5th. This is a record and shows what can be done when one wants to and knows how.

SOUTHWARD BOUND

Washington, June 30.—Representative Ditter, (R.-Pa.), asserted in a statement today that New Deal economic policies were drawing industries out of Pennsylvania into the South. Commenting on a commerce department publication showing national income by states since 1930, Ditter said "these official figures show that Pennsylvania's proportion of the national income has been shrinking during recent years while the low wage states of the Solid South have enjoyed a steadily increasing share of the total income of the nation."

Ditter said the official figures showed that Pennsylvania's combined annual pay rolls shrank from $4,420,000,000 in 1930 to $3,885,000,000 in 1937.

Total wages for South Carolina in 1930 were $271,000,000 and in 1937, $292,000,000. Florida's wage totals increased from $398,000,000 to $420,000,000 and North Carolina's from $535,000,000 to $554,000,000 Ditter said.

Ditter's figures showed a reduction on Georgia's total wages from $528,000,100 to $522,000,000, while Tennessee's $510,000,000 total showed no change.
