Cotton Stamps Will Buy Farm Girl's College Hose

The farm family wants to help daughter Mary in every way possible when she goes off to college next Fall. Shown above is the saleswoman examining inexpensive cotton hose for campus wear. The AAA cotton stamp plan will enable the family to supply Mary with plenty of college hose—free. North Carolina cotton farmers will earn about $2,000,000 in cotton stamps for purchases of American cotton goods this year by curtailing 1941 cotton acreage. Distribution of the first stamps in the state is scheduled to begin next week.

Timely Farm Questions

Answered at State College

QUESTION: How many different kinds of vegetables can be grown in North Carolina?

ANSWER: According to H. R. Niswonger, Extension horticulturist, it is not a difficult task to grow as many as 20 different kinds of vegetables during some period of the year in North Carolina, and have at least three or more different kinds growing each month in the garden for at least eight months of the year. He suggests that farmers write for Extension Circular No. 122, "The Farm and Home Garden Manual." It is free upon request to the Agricultural Editor, N. C. State College, Raleigh, N. C.

QUESTION: What publications are available on poultry production?

ANSWER: The State College Extension Service has published the following poultry bulletins, any and all of which are available free upon request to the Agricultural Editor, N. C. State College, Raleigh: Circular No. 154, "Common Diseases of Poultry;" Circular No. 155, "Artificial Incubation and Brooding of Chickens;" Circular No. 156, "How to Cull Poultry Flocks;" Circular No. 158, "Feeding for Egg Production;" Circular No. 160, "Parasites of Poultry;" Circular No. 239, "Grazing Crops for Poultry;" Circular No. 244, "Poultry Breeding as a Means of Flock Improvement;" Circular No. 245, "Feed Formulas for Poultry;" and Circular No. 249, "Incubation."

QUESTION: When may dairy animals be bred?

ANSWER: The growth and development of the individual animal will determine the proper time to breed, says John A. Arey, Extension dairy specialist. If the heifer has been well developed, the following breeding ages are
