supreme crisis in the battle for Moscow was acknowledged by the Russians tonight, for the Germans were beating downward from northwest of the city in mighty assaults imperiling the Red line along the upper Volga River, and still were unchecked in a second powerful offensive from the west.

In the northwest about Kalinin 95 miles above the capital, the invaders struck with tanks, arm-ored cars, planes and infantry spearheaded by parachutists drop-ping behind the Russian formations; and while a force of these latter was declared annihilated, it was admitted that isolated Nazi salients were being extended.

To the west, from the theater of Vyazma, which itself is 125 miles from Moscow, even greater German forces were pounding forward in the most terrible fighting of all the war—advancing, said the official Soviet army organ Red Star, "only across the
