Both Archie and Floyd Patterson may be finished, and another great battler, Gene, Fullmer, might also hang the gloves up if he loses his next fight to Dick Tiger, as he did the first. Thus, there could be a new

The majority of boxing experts feel Patterson will lose again to Liston. They think Tiger will beat Fullmer again. And few think Archie would do any bet-ter in a second go at Clay than he did the other night.

By T. H. Pearce

The thought occurs to me that I didn't write as much about my boating friends last summer as I usually do. Just hap-pened to think of an incident as I was sitting here longingly thinking of the coming of warm weather. This happened, last summer.

Seems that there is a certain gentleman who has been in the habit of borrowing a boat which belongs to a friend of mine, whenever he finds himself in need of such a method of transportation.

I might add that the boat owned by this friend of mine is not new, but runs good, pulls skis well, and does just about everything that a boat needs to do and up to a point this other guy had no qualms whatsoever about came a time, however, when the boat borrower was going to entertain some friends and he wanted to make a good im-pression for some reason or another. Well he mentioned to the boat owner that he thought guests pass out tidbits from the table. Not only does this encourage the bad habit of begging when people are eating, but you have no way of knowing how much your pet has consumed. would take these visitors up to the lake for an afternoon of boating, swimming, etc. So my friend says, "that's a good idea, come get my boat, I'm not going to be using it."

"Oh", said the boat borrower, "I've" already asked

He borrowed the fancy new boat, big motor and trailer, and street. A policeman called after him: "Hey, buddy, drop a nickel in that parking meter." he and his wife along with the friends he wanted to impress, "Put it in yourself," the GI yelled back. ing poles, snake bite kit, con-sisting of two fifths and a pint, beach umbrella, air mattress, and all the other little items outings.

Well they got to the lake, backed the trailer down to the water to unload the boat and all the gear. This is where trouble started. They got the boat into only to find out that one little item was missing, seems that he had forgotten the switch key needed to start the big fancy new out-board motor.

He chuckled and said, "Oh well that's not much trouble, Pil just straight wire her and she'll start right up."
About an hour later and they were ready to kry it again. Sure enough he had it straight wired alright, the starter whirred and spun the mojor vigorously, then it spun it some more and then some more and then some more and then it spun it some more, out it wouldn't bit a lick. He checked his gas, the gas line, spark plugs, running lights, anchor, water skis, air in the trailer tires and even looked underneath a couple of nearby rocks. He prayed, curstried putting a hex on it and findly consulted an interested root doctor who was fishing nearby, but the motor simply wouldn't start.

After what seemed like hours of spinning the motor with the starter the nice new battery gave out. So naturally he swap-ped for the one in the car. Finally, after what seemed an eternity of cranking, checking and double checking, he gave up, the second battery was very near dead by this time any way; so they loaded the nice new boat and motor back on the nice new trailer back of his car with the nearly dead battery and every body slunk back into the car for the homeward trip, With the last spark in the battery the car engine caught and they hauled the trailer out of the water headed for home, but there was one slight delay. Hearing a bumping noise he stopped and wasn't too surprised to find that one of the cars tires was flat as the proverbial pancake. He said that this didn't surprise him to much, because by now he had decided that nothing was going right anyway. They crawled out, disscon-nected the trailer so he could get to the spare which they placed on the wheel, put the flat in the boot and continued on the way home without further incident. I understand that it was a sort of silent trip back, but one thing is for sure, I'll bet they really made an impression or those folks and after all that is what they were trying to do
