It just seems as though bad luck just follows some folks—take a series of incidents which happened to a certain fellow recently. All his luck isn't bad though, because this series of happenings only came about because he had recently been promoted into a better job.

The first thing that went wrong was his car getting severely damaged by a hit and run driver, but even here his luck was part good because no one was hurt.

However, while his car was being repaired the company doing the work let him drive one of their vehicles. Another wreck resulted in this one being chalked up as a total loss. Still his luck was not all bad because again, no one was hurt.

He figured that since he had a new job which involves a good bit of traveling it might be wise if he purchased a second car. He looked for one that would serve his purpose, finally found one for $200 that looked like a bargain, so he bought it.

Yes, sir, he got a real bargain. That car really ran like a top, until the engine came apart, this is, which didn't take long. Seems that he had been driving it without oil and most machines will tell you that this is one of the best and fastest ways to ruin an engine.

He went back to the garage and was somewhat disheartened to hear an estimate of $130 to repair the engine of the $200 bargain, but there was no help for it. A car without an engine is worth practically nothing—unless you have a team of horses to hitch to it that is, and he didn't; so he left word for them to go ahead and make the necessary hundred and thirty bucks worth of repairs.

Time passed. He went back to get his car at the appointed time, expecting it to be ready to drive away, but was more than a little surprised to find the mechanics just beginning to tear the engine down.

"I thought you said that you would have this thing ready this morning," said he to the shop foreman.

"Well," replied the S.F., "we did have it ready, just when we said we would, but one of the mechanics took it out for a road test and the engine blew up." He seemed somewhat embarrassed, for some strange reason.

However, our friend's luck was still not all bad, because I understand that the garage is putting in the last engine at their expense.

If you have been around Louisburg lately you most certainly have seen all that pipe he-side the various streets not to mention the places where equipment is working digging ditches and putting the stuff in the ground.

Girl To Girl

"Bored with office routine; what can the Army offer?"

Judging by your question, I gather that your ordeal of punching a clock day in and day out is not exactly the routine you go for. The same old 9-to-5 stint can get pretty dull. As an adventurous, fun-loving young woman, you can have an Army life in which every day is exciting. You'll have a job check-full of social professional, and education opportunities. I'm referring, of course, to the kind of job you can have in the Women's Army Corps—a job in which you'll feel mighty important because you will be important. And with it all comes the chance to do quite a bit of traveling. What could be a better combination?

So if you're looking for a job that offers a lot of challenge and a lot of satisfaction, too-drop by my office soon. I'll be most happy to tell you more about the life that can be yours as a member of the Women's Army Corps.

Jolly 19 Meets

The Jolly 19 Home Demonstration Club held its regular monthly meeting in the home of Mrs. C. T. Hudson.

The demonstration presented by Mrs. George Fuller, Home Economics Agent, was "Selecting Automatic Washers and Dryers." One should shop around before buying either of these appliances. This demonstration was very helpful to those who own automatic washers and dryers and also for those who help to buy.

Two leaders reports were given. Mrs. H. B. Winn, told of the success of the cancer drive in her community. Mrs. Paul Hudson, gave a short report on canning and preserving. This report was interesting as it will soon be time to start storing foods for the winter months.

A delicious salad was served with coffee.

Well you probably know that all this is part of the vast sewer and water improvement work going on in the town. They are going to run sewer lines to a lot of places where it has not been available heretofore. As a matter of fact, I heard one gentleman declare that he had just returned from Bunn and he vowed that they had already run the sewer line half way down the highway towards that town.

Same man said that some years ago he was told by a town official that it would cost him $8000 to get water and sewer lines to run to some property he owned. Then a day or two later this same official returned and told him that he had made a slight miscalculation and that it would cost only $800.

If that is a slight miscalculation I'd hate to see a big one.

News Report From Washington

1964 Conventions - Miami Beach Location - Cuban Refugee Objections - Final Choice in June

Washington, D.C. - The turbulent Cuban refugee situation could persuade Democrats against picking Miami Beach for their 1964 national convention.

There is no reason to believe, however, that Republicans may have no such reluctance and that they could even regard it as a favorable psychological factor.

Both parties insist here that no decision has been made for or against the Florida city yet and that it will be mid-June before a site verdict is reached.

A key Democratic National Committee source has acknowledged, however, that a "deterioration" of the situation among the Cuban exiles in south Florida has come about subsequent to the visit of the site selection committee to Miami Beach.

On the other hand, Chairman William Miller of the GOP National Committee, has said that the refugee situation won't in any way affect "objective consideration" of Miami Beach by Republicans as a possible convention site for next year.

According to the Democratic spokesman, San Francisco has told the committee it wants to revise its bid upward before a final selection is made by that party.

The West Coast originally had offered $400,000 and said it would try to raise another $150,000 through private subscription.

Atlantic City has already offered $550,000 but Miami Beach is still high from a money standpoint with $600,000 bid to the Democrats.

The same offer has been made to Republicans site selectors by the Floridians.

It is generally thought the final decision on the Democratic side will rest heavily with President Kennedy. If he prefers Chicago, as some reports say, the National Committee professes to know nothing about it and points up the fact the windy City has yet made no firm money offer.

Republicans are due to make their final choice just prior to a meeting of the National Committee in late June.

They have received feelers from Atlantic City, San Francisco, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit and Philadelphia as well as from Miami Beach and expect to narrow that list down to two or three possible locations later this month.

Spring Planting

All over the country at this time of year farmers are preparing their fields for the spring planting. Today there is a growing trend toward the use of bulk fertilizer, which is less costly than bagged material. With this new spinner-type New Idea spreader holding up to two tons of fertilizer, the farmer can spread his fields in a uniform pattern up to 56 feet wide using pelleted, granulated and semi-granulated fertilizer.

Comment On Sports

BASEBALL By Pete Fritchie

Washington, D.C. - Perhaps the most important unseen factor in professional baseball is morale and team spirit. Some tend to overlook this key to sports success in Major League baseball, because baseball is a professional game.

It is nevertheless all-important in the sport. One reason for the record of the New York Yankees is team spirit and the Yankee tradition. The Yankees don't win every year on superior talent alone.

Superior talent does not always win. Superior talent plus good team spirit will win and the Yankees have usually had that combination. But they have won against clubs with equal player talent, clubs which did not possess the spirit or the self-confidence which goes with a great tradition of winning.

There was morale trouble on the Los Angeles Dodgers squad at the beginning of the year and the result was reflected in box scores.

There was morale trouble on the Cleveland squad in 1940 and it costs that club the pennant.

There was morale trouble on the Milwaukee Braves club in recent years under Charlie Dressen and the Braves lagged far behind where they should have been in National League standings.

Eddie Stanky likewise failed to do much for the St. Louis Cardinals because he did not generate the team spirit he should have generated as manager.

The Cardinals this year have the spirit. Their playing reflects it, as do the standings.

So it is the same old story with athletes competing in sports events, whether it be high school football or Major League baseball at the highest level.

Team morale and team spirit are necessary prerequisites of success. A team with ample talent, not playing up to expectations or capacity, is either being mishandled or suffering from a lack of the right winning spirit.

Los Angeles and Detroit teams appeared to be suffering from such trouble in recent weeks, in the Major Leagues, and the play of both the Dodgers and the Tigers indicated as much in the league standings.

We still think that a union of the democratic peoples is the best way to insure the peace of the world.

Baseball League Formed Here

By Clint Fuller

A new baseball league, to be named the Middle Belt League, was organized in a meeting held here Wednesday night. The new league will have four teams, the White Level Reds, New Hope Mets, Durham Bees and the Raleigh Pope Prison Employees. The League schedule starts Saturday with White Level at New Hope and Raleigh at Durham. New Hope will play their games at the Harris School Diamond.

L. L. "Red" Sturdvant is general manager of the White Level Reds with Cliff Hedgepeth field manager. Russell Frazier is manager of the Mets. The Durham team is headed by George Shambley and Raleigh is managed by Lt. R. C. Croom.

Clint Fuller was elected President of the League and L. L. Sturdvant was elected Treasurer. All games will start at 3 P.M., except double headers, which will start at 1:30. The All Star Game will be played at White Level on Sunday, July 14th with the top ten day, July 14th with the top team meeting the best from the other three teams.

The season will end on August 25 with the Playoffs beginning on August 31.

deners however, plant the seeds outdoors, either under the wax paper protectors called hotpaks or directly in the row and expect heads to mature in late summer.

Twelve to fifteen seeds are sown to each inch of row and, when seedlings are about two inches high, they are transplanted to set 18 inches apart. Thus only a very short row need be sown.

Cauliflower heads have poor texture and color if they develop in warm weather. Hence the aim is to have them growing during the cooler days of fall. Seeds may be sown early in July, in a short row, spacing seeds 10 to the inch. As with broccoli, 2-inch-high seedlings are transplanted to stand 18 inches to 2 feet apart.

Like all cabbage relatives, broccoli and cauliflower are attractive to various cabbage worms. A weekly dusting with safe rotenone, freshly purchased each year, will control them.

FLOWERS TO EAT

Snow white heads of Snowball cauliflower reflect good care—heads have been blanched.

Choose a variety of Italian Green Sprouting type broccoli for longest yield of side shoots.

Maybe you never stopped to think about it, but when you are eating a vegetable you're most often eating its leaves (as with carrots, beets or turnips). On rarer occasions it's the stem that tastes so good (celery, kohlrabi) but sometimes you have flowers to eat.

This is the case with cauliflower and broccoli, both members of the cabbage family. Of the two, broccoli is easy to grow, cauliflower a bit harder as it takes a little time to protect the developing heads of bloom from the sun which would turn them purple.

Market gardeners often start broccoli seeds indoors about six weeks before their frost-free date and grow them for an early crop. Most home gar-
