Moore Names Local Manager

Gubernatorial candidate Dan K. Moore took the occasion of his visit to Franklin County Wednesday to announce the appointment of Wallace Tippet, 42-year-old farm implement dealer, as his Campaign Manager for Franklin County. The candidate made the announcement in the office of The Franklin Times. He also announced that his "Cousin Myra", Mrs. Arch Wilson, would be Vice Chairman of his Franklin County campaign. Mrs. Wilson is a cousin of the former judge. Tippet is a veteran of World War II, having served six and a half years in the Navy. He

Business Practices Needed To Increase Farm Income

This is the final article in the series on the Outlook for Farm Income in our area. The series was prepared by N. C. State College extension specialists after a study of the effect of the announced cut in acreage allotment for tobacco. Today's article deals with "Good Business Practices" as needed in today's farm operations. The Times has presented this series of articles in the hope that they might be beneficial to its readers.

If Tar Heel farmers can maintain their gross income in 1964, there is a good chance they can actually increase their net income.

This is the conclusion reached by a group of extension specialists at North Carolina State after studying 1964 farm income prospects.

They had been asked to make the study by Dr. George Hyatt, director of the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service, in wake of the anxiety over the 10 per cent cut in tobacco allotments.

The specialists expressed confidence that '64 farm income could be maintained at the '63 level because of the opportunities that exist for increasing income from many commodities. They also doubted if tobacco income would drop 10 per cent.

In order to get the maximum net income in '64, however, the specialists urged farmers to consider a number of "good farm business practices and cost-cutting possibilities."

Here are some examples: 1. Farmers can reduce interest charges if they borrow money only for the time needed. Many farmers, for example, need money for harvesting tobacco. The proper time to borrow such money is at the beginning of the harvest season, not earlier in the year.

2. Farm people should give attention to what may at first appear to be minor items. Preventative maintenance, for example, can cut large repair bills. Good records can help locate new opportunities for efficiencies and point to profitable enterprises. Filing for gasoline tax refunds or using the investment credit in federal income taxes can add dollars to family income.

3. Farmers should try to understand government farm programs as thoroughly as possible. Use of such things as the lease-and-transfer tobacco program and the lease and re-assignment cotton program can directly affect income.

4. Farmers should try to be flexible enough to cope with emergencies. Due to the short hay crop in 1963, for example, farmers feeding beef herds should use as much low priced roughage as possible during the winter. Grazing of small grain, where available, until early spring could also cut feed costs.

As a final point, the specialist said some farmers should also consider off-farm employment. They cited a study which showed how a reduction in tobacco allotments has affected off-farm employment in the past.

From 1955 to 1957, when fluctuated allotments were cut 29 per cent, off-farm income of farm families in the Northern Piedmont went up about 25 per cent. The change was not as noticeable in the Coastal Plain where fewer opportunities existed for off-farm work.

Local Men Receive State Writeup

The March 14th issue of The State Magazine pays tribute to a former Louisburg resident and two brothers that are presently living here. In an article entitled "Texans Can't Wipe the Tar Off Their Heels", Judge George D. "Bud" Taylor is said to "Have brought honor to the old north state." Judge Taylor has been practicing law in Beaumont, Texas since 1946.

The article also compliments W. H. "Jack" Taylor, Prosecuting Attorney for Franklin's Recorders Court and Jonah C. "Dick" Taylor, a member of the Louisburg Town Council. Both have been life long residents of Louisburg. The State article points out that all three Taylor brothers are Wake Forest College graduates, and all are lawyers.

Rescue Squad Sets Date For Annual Show

The Louisburg Rescue Squad has announced April 15th as the date for this year's Guess the Price Show. The popular annual affair will be held in the Louisburg Armory. The proceeds from the show will be used to equip their new truck, according to an announcement by Chief V. A. Peoples.

The new unit was purchased from Rowe Chevrolet-Buick Co. with the body being donated by Edgecombe Motor Co. It is to be used for fire calls and road side emergencies. It will carry generators and other power equipment.

The show has drawn hundreds to Louisburg in past years and features the guessing of retail prices of a variety of items. The merchandise, which usually amounts to many hundreds of dollars, is donated by local merchants. One of the main prizes this year will be a live pony.

The Rescue service has grown considerably in the past twelve months. To this date in 1962 the units had answered 29 calls; in 1963 it was 24 calls and to date this year they have rendered aid on 45 calls for help.

The show is announced as being held in Raleigh. Mrs. Wilson could not be reached for comment and Tippet said he would make a statement later.

Lake Announces College Manager

The Chairman of the College Student Committee for Beverly Lake, gubernatorial candidate, announced today the appointment of Scott Hunt as College Chairman for Louisburg College. Wallace S. Dunn, III of Raleigh, is head of the committee of college students in behalf of Lake's candidacy.

Lake, a Raleigh attorney, is one of the Big Three candidates for the governor's office in the May 30th Democratic Primary. Lake carried Franklin County as an unsuccessful bid for the post four years ago.

Dr. Whitfield To Head District S. B. A.

Moore Speaks In County

Moore pointed out the need for an experienced man in the governor's office. He stated that he had experience in all three branches of state government and that he had the political know how to get things done. He promised a full time Industrial Development expert for each congressional district if elected and spoke on the future of industrial development in the state. He also said that if elected he would employ a full time farm expert for his office to help in efforts to increase the income of the farmer.

The Asheville native said he would work in the interest of vocational education, and on the "drop out" problems in our schools. He closed his speech by saying, "The reason I am running for governor is that I have a sincere desire to serve all the people of the state. The state has been good to me in the past and I appreciate it. My only ambition is to be a good governor. I seek no political office."

Moore was accompanied on his visit to Franklin County by his wife and daughter-in-law, Fran, whom he introduced to the crowd, along with Mrs. Arch Wilson, his "Cousin Myra," who lives in Louisburg. Rev. Kelly Wilson, Methodist minister, opened the meeting with a short prayer. Moore spoke in Franklinton before appearing in Louisburg.

"North Carolina is entering into a period of development, the likes of which have not been seen in many years," said Gubernatorial Candidate Dan K. Moore to a group of his followers Wednesday afternoon as he spoke in the Franklin County Court House.

The former Superior Court Judge, the second candidate for governor, that has appeared here, was introduced by local farm implement dealer Wallace Tippet, J. H. Talton, local banking official, was Chairman of the Rally.

In answer to a question from the floor as to whether or not the candidate favored the speaker ban law, Moore said, "Being from the mountains, I'm fer it." He went on to add that he felt the taxpayer should not be required to furnish a hall for speakers seeking to overthrow our government.

Demo. Ticket Sale To End
