

Local Cost Of Federal Aid Large

New York, May 7--Of the billions of dollars that are distributed by the Government each year through grants-in-aid, how much is going to Franklin County?

What portion of the money allotted last year, which amounted to $5.3 billion, not including what was spent on roads and highways, went to the local area?

From a study made by the Tax Foundation, a non-profit organization that does research in public spending and taxation, Franklin County's share was relatively large.

During the past fiscal year as estimated $504,000 was earmarked for the local area under the various grants-in-aid programs.

As to the cost of this aid, approximately $317,000 of the total collected locally in Federal taxes represented the county's contribution to the aid program.

There was no intention on the part of the Government to apportion the $5.3 billion that was distributed on a dollar-for-dollar basis. Some communities got back less than they returned in and others got more.

The payments toward the aid program from the State of North Carolina as a whole amounted to $82,000,000. In return, some $129,700,000 in grants flowed back to the state and its localities.

The way the exchange with Washington figured out, for each dollar of aid received through the state, the cost was 63 cents.

Not every area made out that well. In 19 of the states the cost was greater than the value of the grants.

There are more than 50 Federal programs through which funds are distributed to localities throughout the country. Among them are public housing, farm price support, hospital construction, teacher training, flood control, sewage disposal and the acquisition of land for park sites.

Others are more unusual, such as constructing a ski slope and laying out a public golf course. All are listed in a 63-page handbook called "Federal Aids to Communities," put out by the Area Redevelopment Administration.

It states the nature and purpose of each program, the criteria for deciding whether a community is eligible and the Federal agencies to which applications should be sent.

Westward Ho - A New Salad

A Western salad that's working its way East is this citrus and onion salad served on western iceberg lettuce with a choice of two dressings. One dressing is real mayonnaise thinned with orange juice and the other is a mixture of sour cream and real mayonnaise. For the salad, use orange and grapefruit sections and rings of mild onions and serve on crisp lettuce cups.

Orange Mayonnaise Dressing
1/3 cup corn syrup 1/4 cup orange juice
1/2 cup real mayonnaise 1/8 teaspoon grated onion
Gradually stir corn syrup into mayonnaise. Mix in orange juice and onion. Makes 1 1/4 cups.

Mayonnaise Sour Cream Dressing
1/3 cup real mayonnaise 1/2 teaspoon vinegar
1/2 cup dairy sour cream 1/2 teaspoon sugar
Blend all ingredients together. Chill. Serve over chilled raw or cooked vegetables. Makes about 1 cup dressing.

To prepare lettuce cups cut core from lettuce head. Hold cored side up under running water to loosen leaves. Slip leaves off and drain on absorbent paper. Chill until ready to use.

Baseball
By Pete Fritchie

Washington, D. C.--It's too early to see trends in the Majors as definite but there are hopeful signs that things will not be a runaway for the Dodgers or Yankees this year.

Of course, no one thought the Dodgers would run away with it in the National. There is always a good race in the senior Major Loop. But many thought the Yankees would breeze in.

However, the four-straight loss of the World Series has encouraged other American League clubs and even taken its psychological toll among the Yankees. They may come on and win it but they will have to do it over the bodies of several improved and spirited clubs.

Minnesota is again tough, Baltimore is improved, as is Detroit. Chicago may be improved and is surely strong. Washington is greatly improved; Cleveland and Boston may be better balanced. Los Angeles may be stronger than last year--though not a contender as in 1962.

The Yankees aren't yet hitting as of old, and Los Angeles, in the National, is having bad luck and starting pains.

The season is still young and much is yet to develop. But it would be a wonderful turn for baseball if there was a good pennant scrap in both Major Leagues this year. The American League's attendance figures, which have sagged in recent years, are a direct result of a Yankee monopoly in the junior major loop.

The best thing for the game itself would be a tight race, even a new winner in 1964.

In the National, the Dodgers no longer appear favorites. They are one of many possibilities, and that is the way it usually is in the National.

Fishing Lines

By Dick Wolff

Next time at the local tackle shop, pick up one of those new Garcia-Conolon flyrods. Balance it with a good single-action flyrod like the Beaudex, Landex or Pridex.

My word is you'll never put the rig down until it's safe in your tackle collection at home. Only a handful of people in the U. S. can cast a fly more than 100 ft. One is a woman. Her name is Joan Salvato, and she's no heavy-muscled female joke of nature. To the contrary, Joan's about five-four, 115 pounds, and looks more like a dancer than the world's champion woman caster. Grace, poise, and rhythm are what enabled Joan to project 161 ft. of fly line to establish the world's distance record for women.

The other night I watched Joan in one of her infrequent performances before 5,000 fascinated visitors to the N. Y. outdoor show. Deftly, effortlessly, she handled two fly rods, targeting both flies with the accuracy of a circus trick shot artist.

Fly casting, almost a lost art, is coming back strong. In one 1964 "fishing annual," 13 out of 43 articles are devoted to fly fishing. We're rediscovering today what fathers knew 30 years ago, that fly casting is fun and no rod offers more sport in taking fish than the wand-like fly rod.

But there are always dissenters. Tonkin Cane and his buddy of five decades of fishing, O. Catgut Leader, were quick to decry the rebirth of fly angling. Bait casting killed it, spinning buried it, they chorused. They packed in the sport when their bamboo rods splintered, silk lines molded, and pressed iron reels rusted. Some people never enjoy anything. Look here, I said to Tonk and side kick Catgut, we don't use that kind of fly tackle anymore. It's either up in the attic or in the county museum. Down in Florida I landed a 127-pound tarpon using a six-ounce hollow fiberglass rod with a Landex reel. This gear provides the power and control needed for handling big ones, yet is light enough to assure plenty of sport with smaller fish.

Taking up fly-rodging doesn't mean tossing out spinning and baitcasting tackle. Nothing of the kind. Fly fishing merely adds a new, exciting dimension to angling pleasures. Today only one per cent of fishermen know the joys of the fly rod. It's a select group of serious anglers, who want to get the most of hours on the water.

Among the problems that agitate vacant brains is, "How high is up?"
