"Mrs. America" - Leading Homemaker

Meet "Mrs. America", Desree Jenkins, of Columbia, South Carolina, recently chosen the nation's No. 1 homemaker at the annual Mrs. America Pageant.

Now the Mrs.-America contests are being expanded so that up to 50 cities in each State will hold "Mrs. America" contests. The expansion came about when Mrs. America Productions, Inc., Pan American Building, New York City, created franchise opportunities for a State Producer - Director in each State, entitling one individual to hold all future "Mrs. America" contests and to sell local sponsorships to stores, banks, etc.

The new plan means a boost for the "profession" of homemaking--more women vying for the crowns, more happy husbands, more local and national attention focused on the American housewife and her queenly domestic skills.

WESTERN MAN HITS AT DAN

Editor, The Times

I am from Western North Carolina (Canton) and I am feeling more sorry for Central and Eastern N. C. every day. After listening to the Western supporters of Dan Moore tell what he will do for Western N. C., there couldn't be enough State money left over to buy crying towels for the rest of the State.

Western N. C. politicians are already dividing the spoils of Dan Moore's administration if he is elected Governor of N. C. Eastern N. C. has a good tourist attraction in the drama "The Lost Colony." If Dan Moore gets elected Governor you will probably be calling all of Central and Eastern N. C. "The Lost Colony." N. C. needs a Governor for all the state and not just one section.

A Distant Trumpet

Here is a Western, in vivid color, that seems to bring the Indian and cavalry soldier of 1833 back to life.

Troy Donahue, an academy-trained cavalry officer, is sent to a remote post in Arizona territory. Here he finds the troopers sullen, disobedient and in no mood to take orders from the West Pointer. However, Donahue holds his ground around the post and against an Apache ambush in which he saves Lt. Mainwaring's wife, Kitty (Susan Pleshette).

Events follow the usual course, in a story such as this, until Donahue's fiancée (Diane McBain) arrives unexpectedly. This complicates matters but the Apaches solve this problem by killing Lt. Mainwaring. However, there's more to the story than is outlined here.

Boy Wanted

This is an English story: After watching the cross-eyed butcher cutting up the carcasses, the boy assistant edged towards the door.

"I say," he asked the butcher, "do you strike where you're looking?"

"Certainly, I do," replied the butcher.

"In that case you can hold the beef yourself," answered the boy. "I'm off!"
