About Your Home

Wallpaper can do all kinds of decorating tricks for you. A room can be made to look larger, smaller, to have a higher ceiling, a lower ceiling, to seem cooler or warmer through your choice of wallpaper.

Many had effects of structure can be overcome with skillful use of paper. The design or pattern tends to blot out ugly pipes, cracks in plaster and badly shaped rooms.

If you have a hall that is narrow and dark, try papering one side with a simple scenic wallpaper and painting the ceiling and opposite side with the background color of the paper.

This will cause the hall to seem spacious and if the paper chosen has a light background color, the hall can be made much brighter.

Paper can be very expensive, (for the scenic and imported papers) reasonable or cheap. As with most items, it is usually false economy to invest in the cheap product. The best buy for most of us is in the reasonably priced paper. If you buy from a well-known company you will find the paper will last without fading, will wash if advertised to be washable--will, in general, give satisfactory service for a reasonable length of time.

Film Revue

Baby, Rain Must Fall This film will probably be misunderstood, but its purpose is to show why a wife continues to love her shiftless husband.

The story opens when Henry Thomas (Steve McQueen), his wife, Georgette (Lee Remick) and small daughter are reunited in his small home town in Texas after his parole from prison.

Thomas' boyhood, in the foster home of a hard-hearted woman and misunderstanding by the townspeople, could be blamed for his neurotic behavior which shifts from tenderness to brutality.

Miss Remick is patient, understanding and though they are deeply in love old haunts lead to trials that wrench the heart of the viewer.
