Justice St. Petition Returned By Town Council

The new Louisburg Town Council agreed to remove a controversial tree from the property of Walter Cutrell, in its regular monthly meeting held in the town hall Friday night. The tree has been a point of contention for several previous boards. Each has in the past declined to approve the project.

Newly-elected Councilman S. C. (Buster) Foster made the motion and Mrs. Breathe O'Neal, also a new councilwoman, seconded the motion. Veteran Councilman E. F. Thomas abstained from the voting and the motion was unanimously carried.

A petition from the residents of Justice Street, for curb and gutters, was returned to Lee Murray, a resident, for proper signatures and to be presented to the Council at a later date, when a new highway commission is appointed by Governor Dan Moore. No explanation was given for this delay. Councilman Thomas made the motion to return the petition. Councilman Jonah Taylor seconded the motion which was unanimously passed.

Town Administrator E. S. Ford was directed to work with Hill Yarborough to solve a parking lot problem brought to the Board's attention by Yarborough. The complaint pertained to the lot behind the armory.

The Council approved a motion by Taylor to pay to Franklin County the sum of $1,652.56 "in compliance with the previous agreement made in regard to the installation of the water life and elevated tank at the Gay Products Plant." Invoices in amount of $21,236.20 were approved and ordered paid. The Council set Friday, June 25, as the date for their next meeting, at which time they will consider the tentative budget for the coming fiscal year.

Telephone Office Work Underway

Louisburg—Improvement and expansion of the Louisburg telephone exchange is now underway.

Howard T. Pitts, local manager for Carolina Telephone, said today that a $10,000 program is in progress to expand the company's central office equipment here.

Included in the project will be installation of equipment to provide facilities to serve 275 new telephones for subscribers in this area and permit better grades of service to present subscribers.

Pitts said that the growth of Louisburg in recent years has brought about an increased demand for telephone service. This demand has taxed the capacity of present equipment.

Telephones in this area have increased from 1,100 to more than 2,700 in the past ten years.

"The construction program here is in keeping with Carolina Telephone's continuing program to fulfill the telephone needs of the communities it serves," he pointed out.

Pitts said, "The new improvement and expansion program at Louisburg was engineered to allow for telephone growth in the future."

Instructors Needed For Basic Education

Dr. Kenneth M. Wold, President of W. W. Holding Industrial Education Center announced today that the Center will conduct another Teacher Training Institute for the purpose of qualifying interested personnel as teachers for the Basic Adult Education Classes being conducted within Wake and Franklin counties. The rapid expansion in the establishment of Basic Adult Education classes throughout Wake and Franklin counties is resulting in an increase demand of qualified instructors. It was pointed out that the Holding Center presently has 287 students enrolled in grade levels 0-4, in 16 separate classes throughout Wake and Franklin counties.

Dr. Wold emphasized that all instructors are required to be college graduates and must have attended the 12 hour Teacher Training Institute which emphasizes the methods of presenting adult education training material to mature people. Through the cooperation of Mr. Fred Smith, Superintendent of Wake County schools, the Teacher Training Institute will be conducted in the Wake Forest Elementary School on June 21, 22, and 23. The training sessions will begin each evening at 6:30 and end at 10:30.

Senator Sam Says

Washington—The Senate's approval of the constitutionally defective voting bill signals the sharpest turn in years in the alteration of our governmental system.

For what the bill does, as I attempted to point out in the battle over it, is to suspend four separate provisions of the Constitution of the United States as they apply to seven-condemned States. The Constitutional provisions suspended confer upon the States the power to prescribe qualifications for voting.

The magnitude of this change in governmental power can be seen from the principles which the bill overrules. Not since Reconstruction days has a piece of legislation so clearly overruled provision after provision of the Constitution. Nor has legislation approved been so confronted with decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States which substantiate the right of States to prescribe impartial literacy tests or which declare that no provision of the Constitution shall be suspended. Yet, the Senate has chosen to sweep aside these established principles in an attempt to rectify some errors of judgment on the part of election officials.

What can happen under such circumstances is best illustrated by an amendment offered late in the consideration of the voting bill which nullifies New York's requirement that voters must pass a simple English literacy test. The Senate adopted the amendment notwithstanding the fact that it violated the same Constitutional mandate which permitted the seven-Southern States to prescribe voting literacy tests.

During the course of that debate, I pointed out to New York's Senators who proposed the amendment, that New York has a State Constitutional provision which says that no one can vote in New York unless he can read and write the English language. I also stated that New York's constitutional provision has been sustained as a valid exercise of power by the New York Court of Appeals and a three-judge Federal court. These obstacles were brushed aside in the interest of instant correction at the Federal level of a

County Man Charged In Wake Hit-Run

Edward Daniel Inscoc, 24, of Rt. 2, Louisburg was arrested in Raleigh shortly after 12:30 a.m. Sunday on charges of hit and run. Inscoc is reportedly believed to have struck Leonard Brown, 30-year-old Raleigh resident, while Brown was riding a bicycle near the intersection of McDowell and South Streets.

There were allegedly three witnesses to the accident, one of which, Alton Parrott of Franklin St., Raleigh, called the police. Parrott gave the officers a description of the car which matched that of Inscoc's and the Franklin County man was arrested a short time later on Downtown Blvd. in Raleigh.

Inscoc reportedly told officers that he had passed the intersection where Brown was found, but that he was unaware of striking any object. Officers said paint matching the color of the bicycle was found on the front bumper of Inscoc's car and also a dent in the chrome strip above the bumper was sighted. Brown suffered lacerations and head injuries and was listed in serious condition at Wake Memorial Hospital Monday.

Four-Legged Guard

Four-legged life guards are rare. Jimmie Geddle, a guard at Green Hill Country Club pool this year, appears to be in possession of two extra limbs in the photo above. The picture was snapped at the split second some unidentified swimmer passed behind Geddle, giving the appearance of a rare specimen. Mike Carter is the other guard at the pool this year. -Times Staff Photo.

judgment made by the State of New York.

Some have asked why I carried on a battle against the White House, the Democratic leadership, and the Republican leadership on this issue. My answer is simple. I consider the most precious possession that Americans of all races, and all beliefs have is the Constitution of the United States. The cardinal principle violated in this Senate-passed bill is the suspension of clear Constitutional power and rights of all the States in all fields of government. All history and all the experience of man makes this danger clear in the actions of rulers.

Moreover, my fight on this legislation resulted in many of my suggestions being incorporated as amendments or deletions to the measure.

Moon Eclipse Seen Here

A partial eclipse of the moon was observed here Sunday night. Skies were clear during the period from around eight to nine o'clock, when a small segment of the lunar disc was shielded by the shadow of the earth between the sun and the moon.

The spectacle, only one to be visible in North America this year, started two minutes before eight o'clock and ended at 9:40 p.m. The total eclipse was visible to much of the eastern coast of North America, but only the end could be observed in the southeastern coastal area.

At the Morehead Planetarium in Chapel Hill, Director Tony Jenzanso said there would be four eclipses this year. There will be two of the moon and two of the sun, but North Americans will see only this partial eclipse of the moon.

The lunar eclipse was barely heralded in advance, and few people realized it was in prospect. But the shadow that appeared was seen by many, who wondered what it was, having no previous information.
