More Teaching Needed

For what it might be worth, a survey was taken last year among high school students, which reveals some startling results. The survey was conducted by U. S. News and World Report.

The following results were presented as the findings of those students surveyed:

71% would deny an accused person the right to confront his accuser.

41% believe that Freedom of the Press should be canceled.

34% favored the denial of Free Speech to certain people.

26% would allow search and seizure without consent.

53% believe the government should own banks, railroads and steel companies.

56% voted for close government regulation of all businesses.

62% thought a worker should not produce all he can.

62% said the government should have the responsibility to provide jobs.

61% rejected the profit incentive as necessary to survival of the free enterprise system.

84% denied that patriotism is vital and plays an important part in our lives.

From these shocking disclosures, those of us who had up to now found some hope for our country through the next generation, are rudely awakened. The article names the three places where a child might be learning to favor these many things which are contrary to our constitution.

The places are: Home, Church and School. Included are church schools, but it also expresses doubt that those interviewed had much history of attendance at Sunday Schools, or, for that matter, could have had much home life.

It points the finger to the public schools. We agree. It is hard to realize that this type of thinking is being taught in our homes or our churches. Being different now-a-days is to be "In" as the jet-set refers to it. Children want, as much as anything else in the world, to be "In."

Unless some way is found to halt this headstrong rush toward madness, these youngsters are going to find, far too soon, that instead of being "In," they and their freedoms, too, are going to be "Out."

We are certain that this poll did not include youngsters in this area. We are convinced that, by and large, youngsters here are patriotic and they do respect the American system of free enterprise and personal freedoms.

It may be youngsters such as those here who will be called on in the days ahead to "teach" those interviewed just what responsibility means.

President Off On 14B

When President Johnson renewed his demand the other night for repeal of Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act, he sought to justify his demand on the strangest sort of reasoning. Here is his exact statement, as contained in his "State of the Union" address: "by the repeal of section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act (I propose) to make the labor laws in all our states equal to the 31 states which do not have tonight right-to-work measures."

That was it. Nothing more. So, if one takes Mr. Johnson at his word, what he seeks is mandatory uniformity in all of the 50 states, regardless of how any or all of the states may feel about the matter.

There are 19 states of the Union, including North Carolina, which have right-to-work laws on the books. It is the feeling in North Carolina, and 18 other states, that workers ought not to be required by law to pay dues to a union in order to obtain and hold a job. But in the name of "uniformity," President Johnson has renewed his demands that all workers be subject to a requirement that they pay dues to a union in order to obtain work, or to retain the jobs they now have.

We would state an alternative proposition to the President. If what he desires is "uniformity," let him ask Congress to achieve it by enacting a national right-to-work law, which would restore to Americans in 31 states their right to join a union, or refuse to join, as may suit their own individual wishes.

Senator Sam J. Ervin, Jr., delivered a talk this past Friday night in Arlington, Virginia, before the Virginia State Bar Association. He commented that the renewed fight in the Senate over the proposal to repeal Section 14(b) was reminiscent of the prevailing doctrine in France some centuries ago when French Kings possessed virtually absolute power over the lives of their subjects. In that despotic era in France, the right to work was a royal right which the King could sell and which the subjects were required to buy and pay for.

Senator Ervin said that President Johnson's demand for repeal of Section 14(b) is, as he put it, "a call for compulsory unionism, and compulsory unionism is based upon the argument that the right to work is a labor union right, which the labor union can sell and (which) the individual worker must buy if he is to be allowed to earn a livelihood for himself and his loved ones with his own hands and talents."

It remains to be seen, of course, whether President Johnson can successfully command the Congress to do away with the American worker's right to decide whether he wants to join a union. The President has made a political promise to union leaders, and apparently he intends to keep it, even though an overwhelming majority of Americans are opposed to what the President is demanding.

A week ago, Senator Wallace Bennett of Utah arose on the Senate floor to discuss two telegrams which he had received. One was from a union president in his state who berated Senator Bennett for opposing the repeal of Section 14(b). The Seems like we are always getting in debt to somebody.... This time we are in to Dave Daniel, PR man at Louisburg College... or at least Birdie is.... We get our stuff from him.... Don't know if Birdie talked to Dave or if they communicated by carrier pigeon, but Dave has clipped (We use this word advisedly) an article from a newspaper (Where else can you clip an article?)....

It is an amazing bit of information. After all these years, wouldn't you know that it would be a college man who passes on a cure for the common (except mine) cold?

Dave's article, written by some girl, says to wrap a sock around your neck.... Now, admittedly, if you do this with vigor, it will not only cure your cold, but everything else that ails you. Seems it will be more successful if you use a sock worn, it says here, by a healthy man (one that doesn't use Ban'ion his feet) for about three days. The foot part absolutely must be in contact with the skin....

The whole thing is useless unless, for heaven's sake, a woman uses a man's sock and a man uses a woman's sock???

This is getting ridiculous, by now.... The thing says: If you have a runny nose, you get rhinitis (I got a full case right now); if your nose and throat are irritated (I got this, too) you get naso-pharyngitis; if you got a cough (Cough, Cough, Wheez and Sneeze) you got trachetitis; and if your cough goes into your chest (Oh, me) you got bronchitis.

It also says that most colds will clear up if you call the doctor in about seven days. It also says most colds will clear up if you don't call the doctor in about seven days.

I feel worse. Come to think of it, I think I'll take my doctor's advice and hang my hat on the bed post, get into bed, sip whiskey until I see two hats.... Oh, glorious seven days.... Thanks, Dave.

Senator put that telegram in The Congressional Record. Then, however, he immediately followed it with another telegram signed by 2,000 students at Brigham Young University. The telegram, with all of its signatures, was 56 feet long, and Senator Bennett unrolled the telegram for all Senators to see. The Brigham Young students called on Senator Bennett to stick by his word and to contribute his opposition to the proposed repeal of 14(b).

"We cannot support any movement," the telegram from the students said, "which may, in effect, deprive the individual citizen of the freedom of acquiring gainful employment free from the direct influence of collective bargaining through labor unions, should he choose to do so."

Every independent poll taken on the question of repealing Section 14(b) has resulted in overwhelming approval of its not being repealed.

It has boiled down to a choice between what the people want and what labor union bosses demand. It is interesting that President Johnson is demanding that the Congress turn its back on the wishes of the people. Union pressure upon the President for the payment of his political debt must be very great indeed.

Which?

Turning from the huge mound of work piled up in front of him, the tycoon roared at his secretary: "Jackson, where's my confounded pen?"

"Behind your ear, sir."

"Yes, yes, Jackson. Don't waste time. Which ear?"
