Six Bulldogs Get Honorable Mention

Louisburg's outstanding end Thomas Finch, a junior and Franklinton's sophomore center, Cliff Williams; tackle David Secor and back Freddie Coats were among the 23 Tar River Conference gridgers named last night to the year's all conference squad.

Louisburg placed quarterback Jimmy Geddie, halfbacks Mike Wrenn and Jimmy Chesson, fullback Phillip Robertson and linemen Billy Fuller and Doug Estep on the honorable mention list.

Conference champions, Helena Hornets led the balloting, placing six on the 23-man squad. The team, not designated first or second string, was to have had twenty-two members but a three-way tie at center necessitated an extra member.

The South Granville Vikings placed five on the squad and one on the honorable mention list. Helena placed four players on the honorable mention team. The Wakelon Bulldogs placed four, followed by the Franklinton Rams' three and three from the Oxford Orphanage Red Devils.

Louisburg and Spring Hope placed one man each. Wakelon had one member on the honorable mention list.

Each of the 23 players were presented a gold miniature football in ceremonies held here in a local restaurant Wednesday night. Helena Coach Dave Hodge made the presentations. Louisburg Principal Al Fox, President of the Conference, presided at the first banquet of the newly formed league.

Ray Rhodes, Director of Physical Education for the State Department of Public Instruction presented the Coach of the Year award to Hodge for his team having won the conference championship. Fox called Hodge, "A man of the quality of dedication and love of the sport." Hodge thanked his fellow coaches and, without mentioning that one of his players suffered a fatal injury this season, stated, "I've just found out how much courage it takes to play football." He expressed his appreciation to "the boys" in the name of all the coaches for their hard work this year.

Simon Terrell, Executive Secretary of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association was a special guest for the event.

Helena was extended the best wishes of the conference in its play-off game against Liberty Friday night.

Rhodes Tells Gridders It's How You Play The Game

Ray (Dusty) Rhodes, Director of Physical Education for the N. C. Department of Public Instruction told a group of all-conference football players, their coaches, principals and guests, Wednesday night, "Win or lose, doesn't really matter, it's how you play the game."

Rhodes was principal speaker at the first annual Tar River Conference football banquet held here. He talked of what football and athletics means to young men and asked each to decide for themselves what the game has meant to them.

Twenty-two of the 23 gridgers selected to the all-conference team were present to hear the address.

Rhodes, a former player and coach himself, recalled many of his experiences and emphasized that he now recalls the boys he coached but not the teams or the victories. "I believe everybody wants to win," he said, "But there are many who do not want to make the sacrifice or to put out what it takes."

He talked of the value of participation in sports and commended the boys as an "elite" group stating that a high percentage of young men in school today have not participated in athletics. He said such activities taught men to hold their temper, personal discipline and to take care of their bodies in the years to come.

"If you're a winner in athletics, you're going to be winners in many other areas of life. Athletics help to develop confidence. This ability is not inborn. Instead, it develops

Wilcox, Ariz.--Ned Beesbs did not forget the wonderful feeling he had when a dime was handed to him 60 years ago in an orphanage. Beesbs, now 72, sent a check for $25,000 to the Mountain State Orphans Home in Montana with these words, "A gift of appreciation."

and grows," Rhodes added. "There is no short cut to success," he stated, "It's hard work and sacrifices its perseverance and sacrifice; its personal discipline."

He also spoke of the losers, saying that "Those who come in second, make champions of those who come in first. When you've given it everything you've got, you are a winner, too."

He told the young men, "Life is a struggle and football is a way of condensing the challenges." Rhodes also complimented the coaches for their season.

Rhodes was introduced by Hiram Guedalia, Coach of the Franklinton Rams. Louisburg principal A. D. Fox, president of the conference presided and Wakelon principal Johnny Alford gave the invocation.

The group observed a moment of silent prayer in memory of Bradley McBroom, a member of the Helena squad, who died last week following a football injury. Helena Coach Dave Hodge was presented the Coach of the Year award and he with Ronnie Peed and Gary Gravette accepted the championship trophy for Rhodes. Hodge also handed out gold miniature footballs to the members of the all-conference squad.

Simon Terrell, Executive Secretary of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association was special guest of the conference.
