Business Association Holds Annual Meeting

The Louisburg Business Association held its angual meeting here Monday night and disclosed that the local organization has been accepted into the Associated Credit Bureaus of America. The organization has also been accepted into the Credit Bureau Reports, Inc. a Houston, Texas association.

Mrs. Juanita Pleasants, Executive Secretary of the group, told in her annual report, that the name would soon be changed to the Franklin County" Business Association and Credit Bureau.

Clint Fuller, past president of the Association and editor of The Franklin Times was the featured speaker. Fuller, introduced by Wallace Tippett, also a past president, told the group, "If a town is to become great, it tely must have a healthy economic community. When our people are complacent about their businesses, when they place their emphasis on other things, as long as they are satisfied that someone else is looking after it, Louisburg will not be healthy economically, and Louisburg will not grow". Fuller said, "Healthy economic communities do not just happen. They require a great deal of work, santifice and the eager cooperation of all its citizens. Louisburg has no place to go that the Business Association can't carry it". He compared Louisburg's lack of growth with the growing cities of Durham, Raleigh and Wilson saying "The decision was made for us 181 years ago". The reference was to the carly decision by settlers here to place emphasis only on education. Sprinkling his remarks with Louis-burg history, Fuller recalled that Gen-William T. Sherman had once asked "Louisburg, What and Where is it?" He called on the Association to "Build a spirit among our fellow citizens" and he said we need to promote our community and to advertise it and to "build for it, good public relations".

He reminded those present that "membership is a responsibility and there is a great deal more to it than just paying one's dues".

He closed his remarks with the suggestion that "We strike out toward a goal of building a strong, healthy economic community and all other things will come to us". Mrs. Breattie C. O'Neal gave the nominating committee report and she and Freddie Hight, local clothing store operator were elected to two year terms on the Board of Directors. Other
