Not In Philly

One day last week, the two leading Philadelphia, Pa. newspapers carried banner headlines on page one about problems in the Philadelphia schools. The Daily News pictures an irate mother, mouth agog over the fact that her son was beaten at school and was later arrested. A second picture shows a white mother and a Negro mother shaking hands and the caption says they are saying, "Let's stop all this division"

The Evening Bulletin, the newspaper of which it is said, "nearly everybody in Philadelphia reads," reports in its headlines, "Police Disperse 500 Pupils Sitting In At Olney High; Rizzo Rigs Schools Officials". Subheads cry: "Suspensions Advocated by Police Chief" and "7 Demands Are Issued At Franklin".

The story following the headlines tells of a sit-in by 500 Negro children and says, "Seven of the city's schools have been plagued by racial disorders since last week".

Strangely, there is no reference in the eight articles on the first three pages of The Bulletin, which concern racial disorder in the Philadelphia schools, about the presence of the FBI. Nor, disappointingly, is there any reference whatsoever, to the United States Justice Department or the Civil Rights Division of HEW.

One would assume that Philadelphia, the City of Brotherly Love, is still part of the Union. Surely, the Liberty Bell and the Home of Betsy Ross and the Constitution Hall deserve to be a part of the United States. And certainly the people should be American citizens. Why then, one is compelled to ask, are not these good people being afforded the protection under the constitution? Why do they not deserve, as much as we here in Franklin County, equal protection under

Why are we blessed with an abundance of federal agents here where there has never been any type of racial disorder and poor old underprivileged Philadelphia is without them just when they are needed most?

The same newspaper reported a story from Chicago (that's another Northern city) that up to 90 percent of students in 14 schools were boycotting. A 17-year-old "leader" is quoted as saying, "We'll be out every Monday until we get what we want". And still another reports that the lady president of the Home and Social Association of South Philadelphia High School has issued a request for "more guards" at the school.

And while this goes on, a small article at the bottom of page three relates to some nut, sitting on a rooftop and shooting four people over on 36th Street. The president of the teacher's union is quoted as saying that "outside agitators" are allowed to enter the schools freely.

All this is serious business, whether it be in Philadelphia or anywhere else. Such reports as these are a disgrace to this nation and to its people. The sad part is that this is one day's reporting in one city in the country.

We've got our problems here in Franklin County, to be sure. But, think about this next one. How would you like to live in Philadelphia?

Humanitarian To Speak At College

Dr. George D. Kelsey, humanitarian and authority on ethics from Drew University, will participate in a symposium at Louisburg College October 28 and 29 at 8 p.m. in the College Auditorium. The lecture topics are "The College's Role in Promoting Harmony in Human Relations," and are open free of charge to the public.

Dr. Kelsey, and Dr. Ashley Mon-tagu who opened the symposium last month, are prominent lecturers provided for by a $1800 grant to Louis-burg College from the S&H Foundation. The college won the grant in competition with more than 420 S&H Foundation's Lectureship Program, established in 1960 as a part of The Sperry and Hutchinson Company's program of aid to education, has awarded 283 grants to more than 200 colleges and universities which have participated in the program.

Dr. Kelsey began his teaching career as a member of the faculty of Morehouse College in Atlanta, Georgia, serving as Professor of Religion and Philosophy from 1938 to 1945 and as Director of the School of Religion from 1945 to 1948. While a member faculty of Morehouse College Dr. Kelsey also served as visiting pro-fessor in the Gammon Theological

In 1948 he joined the staff of the Federal Council of Churches as As-sociate Secretary in the field depart-ment, continuing in the same post in the National Council of Churches from 1950 to 1952. In 1952 he became a member of the faculty of Drew Uni-

Dr. Kelsey is a member of the Committee of Southern Churchmen, the Society of Religion in Higher Education, the Association of Pro-fessors of Christian Ethics, and the Alumni Council of the Yale Divinity

The author of Racism and the Christian Understanding of Man, he has contributed chapters to symposia and articles to various religious and academic journals. He is also a distinguished lecturer for the Danforth

The engineers claim that this will provide adequate water and fire protection to the community and to the industrial site.

It is expected that, if the project proceeds smoothly, water will be flowing to Bunn residents by next summer.

A meeting is being scheduled soon by the engineers with the citizens of Bunn to explain the project and answer any questions which may arise.

NATION'S BUSINESS · OCTOBER 1968

A single vote often has shaped the course of American history. For three Presidents elected by one vote. The year 1800: Thomas Jeffer-son was elected President over Aaron Burr by one vote in the House of Representatives, following a tie in electoral votes.

The year 1824: John Quincy Adams gained the Presidency by one vote when the contest was decided in the House of Representa-

The year 1876: Rutherford B. Hayes won election by one electora vote over his opponent, Samuel J.

And a single vote saved a President from removal from office-Andrew Johnson. The only President ever impeached would have been removed but for just one vote in the Senate.

Hairline elections

The fact is, your vote does count. Among the tales of comic, hairline elections is that of the man who will never again tell his wife not to vote. He was running for his third term in the Georgia House

Feeling sure that he would have no opposition, he assured his wife that it was unnecessary to go to the polls. But little did he bargain for a spur-of-the-moment, write-in vote in his district. His opponent fared so well the final showed a surprising 254-254 tie.

In 1963, a candidate for council in a Cincinnati suburb was hospitalized for an emergency appendectomy, and so unable to go to the polls. He lost by one vote.

Presidential squeakers

No better illustration of the "onevote-your vote-counts" theme exists than in John F. Kennedy's triumph over Richard Nixon in 1960. About one half of one per cent of the votes cast in two states, Illinois and New Jersey, swung 43 electoral votes to Mr. Kennedy. If that tiny percentage of the votes in those two states had been reversed, it would have been enough to throw the election into the House of Representatives By less than one vote per precinct in two states, Ohio and California, President Truman defeated Thomas Dewey in 1948.

In 1916, Republican Presidential candidate Charles Evans Hughes went to bed thinking himself the winner. But Woodrow Wilson defeated him by carrying one state, California, by less than one vote per precinct. Wilson took California by 3,806 votes out of nearly one million cast.

W. Averell Harriman won the New York governorship over his G.O.P. rival, Senator Irving Ives, in 1954 by slightly more than one vote per election district. Clifford Case, Republican of New Jersey, was elected to the U.S. Senate that year by a margin of less than one vote per precinct.

The 1928 New York gubernatorial election saw Franklin D. Roosevelt defeat his Republican opponent by 25,000 votes out of four million cast-a margin of about two votes per precinct. A new era in history was launched with FDR's win. In more recent times, in 1948, a young Texas Congressman won a Senate seat by 87 votes out of more than two million votes cast. His name: Lyndon B. Johnson.

Five states were admitted to the union by a one vote margin in Congress: Texas (1845), California (1850), Oregon (1859), Idaho (1890) and Washington (1899).

In 1941, one vote in the U.S. Senate saved the Draft Act just 12 weeks before Pearl Harbor, and in 1918 one vote helped kill the League of Nations.

When voters stay away

The close governorship races in 1962 no doubt reflected poor voter turnout. Less than half of the eligible voters in the United States voted in the '62 elections.

The Governor of Minnesota was elected by only 91 votes.

The Governor of Rhode Island was elected by 398 votes.

The Governor of Maine was elected by 483 votes. The Governor of Vermont was elected by 1,348 votes.

The Governor of North Dakota

was elected by 1,007 votes.

The importance of the get-outand-vote drive is being pushed with urgency this year. If you and others stay away from the polls on Nov 5, your absence could change the results in hundreds of important elections.

In fact, it could change history.

Fountain Gets New Pen

Washington, D. C. . . I have a new pen which has special significance for me and which I would like to use as the starting point of our discussion this week. This pen carries the presi-dential seal and in the box with it is a notation reading, "This is a pen from the cere-mony on October 16, 1968, when the President signed S. 698. 'The Intergovernmental Cooperation Act of 1968.'" I have received other pens from the signing of legislation with which I have been associated as a member of Con-gress, but I am particularly proud of this one because of the subject of the legislation involved The Intergovernmental Cooperation Act represents the culmination of years of study and work by the Intergovernmental Relations Subcommittee and the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations.

Basically, the Act will give the states and local governments a stronger voice in the operation of Federal grant-in

More specifically, it pro-vides for reform in five areas.

First, it streamlines the procedures and book work in actually transferring funds from the Federal government to other governments and improves the flow of information about Federal grants.

Second, the Act makes specialized and technical services of the Federal government available to the states and localities on a reimbursable basis. Economy is the major goal behind this sec-

Third, the legislation es-tablishes for the first time a coordinated policy - on an intergovernmental basis - for grants for urban development purposes. Fourth, it requires uniform policies and procedures for the purchase, sale and use of land in urban areas by the General Services Administra-

Fifth and, in my opinion, the most important, the Act provides for systematic, periodic congressional review of grant-in-aid programs which have no termination date specified by the author-izing legislation.

Every four years, the appropriate congressional com-mittees will examine the programs to see if the purposes for which they were created are being achieved, whether they have served their pur-pose and should be ended, and whether they should be changed in some manner.

As I said, years of effort went into this Act. Let me quote from a new book by Professor Deil S. Wright of the University of North Caro-lina at Chapel Hill.

Professor Wright, in the book titled "Federal Grantsin-aid: Perspectives and Alternatives," says:

"Ten years ago, in its landmark report on grants-in-aid, the House Intergovernmental Relations Subcommittee (Fountain Committee) called upon Congress to (1) provide a clear expression of each grant program's goals. (2) establish a requirement for regular review of the program in order to assess accomplish ment, evaluate met and unmet needs . . . " and so on. Professor Wright draws heavily on that report for other portions of his book.

The legislative road can sometimes be long and tortuous, especially when the subject is complex and not always readily understood or accepted by all who are in ten years ago, led to legisla-tion I introduced several years back creating the Advisory Commission on Inter-governmental Relations.

The Advisory Commission of which I have been a member since its founding, to gether with the Intergovernmental Relations Subcommit tees of the House and Senate, spent years studying and working out the many legislative details which had to be solved and in gaining the necessary support for this important legislation.

I first introduced the Intergovernmental Cooperation Act in the House in the last Congress and introduced this legislation again early last year. We finally saw it be come law when it was signed by the President.

Such an accomplishment in a complicated field like intergovernmental relations is never easy. The success of this Act is a tribute to the many devoted individuals, both elected and non-elected, who refused to give up.

And now that it's the law.

its administrative and legislative effectiveness will depend upon the competency and good faith of those called upon to comply with it.

Our state and local govern ments and the entire country will be the beneficiaries It's about time, don't you think?

Community Of 1,000: What Would We Be?

By W. E. H. In The Sanford Herald

Found an item from Borden Manufacturing company plant bulletin which capsules what would be the worldwide situa-tion if there were only 1,000 people (average up) reads as "If the world were 1,000 people . . "There would be 60 Americans . . . and 940 representing the rest of the world.

"Americans would possess half of the income, the 940 would divide the other half. "330 would be Christians, 670 would not. Fewer than 100 would be Protestants, about 230 Roman Catholics.

"At least 80 would be practicing Communists, 370 more would be under Communist domination. "303 would be white . . . 697 non-white.

"300 would never have heard of Jesus Christ . . . more than 500 would be hearing about Karl Marx, Lenin, Stalin,

"Americans would have a life expectancy of 70 years . . . the remainder less than 40 years, on the average.

"The 60 Americans and about 200 others (in Western Europe) and a few favored classes elsewhere would be relatively well-off in all respects . . . the rest would be ignorant, pour, hungry and sick.

"American families would be spending at least $850 annual ly for military defense, less than $4 a year to share religious faith with the other people of the Community.

"The Americans would be rich and well-fed . . . the other 940 would be hungry most of the time."

The above needs little comment, deserves careful and thoughtful study. Most points are in our favor, some are not.
