

Trend To Fewer Traffic Injuries

Raleigh - The trend to fewer serious traffic injuries on the streets and highways of North Carolina has continued through the first 10 months of 1968, according to the Department of Motor Vehicles.

While the total for all injuries has risen slightly above the 10-month figure for 1967, serious injuries—those involving broken bones, bleeding wounds and other severe physical impairment—have dropped substantially.

Information collected by the department's Driver Education and Accident Records Division reveal that there have been 712 fewer injuries classified as serious through October, 1968, than during the comparable period last year. The total for 1968 is 32,532 as compared to the 1967 total of 33,244.

If non-serious injuries—those claimed by wreck victims, but not obvious to investigating officers—are included, the 1968 figure rises to 4,653. This represents an overall increase in traffic accident injuries during the 10-month period of just 39 individuals.

Motor Vehicle officials point to an increase of approximately six per cent in the number of miles traveled in the state this year to indicate some progress in efforts to reduce injuries. These officials have previously attributed the reduction in serious injuries to the installation of new safety devices on cars and the increasing willingness of motorists and passengers to use safety belts.

Crisp autumn days and a full schedule of activities mean a need for hearty family suppers to prepare ahead of time. This one stars a molded Ham, Pea, and Celery Salad, zestily flavored and based on lemon gelatin. (It's also a good way to use up the last of the baked ham.)
