Noted Teacher

(Continued from Page 2) implements it on the keys. "It's not just a case of teaching an impaired child to play a piano or horn," Weber explains. "It uses music as a motivator for development of reading and writing and other skills. The piano keyboard becomes a teaching machine."

This fascinating method does not stop at the alphabet. Weber uses numbers, colors, and geometric shapes as well. He says the first aim of all his material is "to help the child cope independently with symbols on the printed page. This is a springboard for learning and helps the student to do things for himself. Students who have experienced learning difficulties seem to accept the sound of music as a teacher and motivator."

Weber calls his approach to learning "T.W.A. — Think, Wait, and Act." Its effectiveness lies in the "Wait" — the child points to the symbol on the pages, waits until he finds it on the keyboard, then strikes the key. The waiting period, Weber explains, instills a sense of timing in the impulsive child. It is interesting to note that he eliminates rhythm in the first stages of his teaching, calling it "a sophisticated, harmful concept." If the child is pressured to perform rhythmically, it interferes with the "Wait" period. "Rhythm comes later, automatically," Weber continues.

Weber's "T.W.A." method, also called "Musical" because it is designed to reach all learners, became the basis for his Ed.D. thesis which he completed at Columbia University's Teachers' College in 1966.

He came to Trenton State College in 1966, where, among his many other activities, he conducts a graduate seminar in "Music for Exceptional Children." His work has been twice featured in the New York Times, and has also appeared in the Reader's Digest (August 1968) under the title, "Pied Piper from Peoria."

Dr. Weber has the endorsement of numerous State Departments of Education, the Council for Exceptional Children, and the President's Committee on Mental Retardation. In fact, before the Sargeant Shriver left for Paris, Weber did a day's demonstration at their Washington home, with Mrs. Rose Kennedy present.

He conducts workshops for psychologists and music educators across the country. On October 25, Weber demonstrated his method at the National Association for Retarded Children in Detroit, Michigan.

This past summer he worked with Mongoloids in Hawaii, teaching children as young as three years.

News Maker

In addition to the troubles with the court, teacher shortages, crowded and overtaxed facilities, the Board had an annual, traditional tangle with the Board of County Commissioners over a piece of land. Added to these were the full quota of complaints from parents, students and the general public which accompanies each school opening and the five members of the Board of Education gets the nod as the greatest makers of news in this area this year.

Youngville Winners Announced

Youngville - Winners in the Christmas Home Decoration Contest sponsored by the Youngville Woman's Club are Mrs. G. E. Winston who won the first place blue ribbon award; Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Sanders, red ribbon for second place; Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Tharrington, white ribbon for third place; and Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Holden, a yellow ribbon, for the most original award. Winners were also presented gifts donated by merchants.

Center of interest at the Winston home was the front door which was framed in graceful greenery entwined with golden tinsel and adorned with golden bells. A decoration in the center of the door was greenery tied with bells.

The picture window at the Sanders home was aglow with gold lights shining from a green tree haloed with angel hair. Green wreaths in windows were trimmed with gold velvet bows and streamers. A matching door wreath was hung over a golden background.

At the Tharrington home, on the doorway was a three-dimension green tree decorated with touches of red. Shining from the picture window was a silver tree. On the garage door was a massive wreath gleaming with a circle of multi-color lights.

At the Holden home, pairs of empty shoes on the porch led from the steps to the door which was framed with greenery and lights against a red background. Hanging at each side of the door was a hat trimmed with holiday decorations.

Washington, D. C. — The recent draft of players by four new Major League teams from the present twenty, at a cost of $22,500,000, gives some idea of the roster of the new teams — but trades and new purchases are still necessary before the four new clubs can field competitive teams.

Here are the pitching rosters, for example: Montreal (NL)—Larry Jackson, if he doesn't retire, Jim Grant, Larry Jaster, Jack Billingham, Don Shaw and Bill Stoneman.

San Diego (NL)—Al McBean, Billy McCool, Dick Selma, Dave Gusti, Dick Kelley and Tom Dukes.

Since pitching is of supreme importance, all four new clubs are stronger in that department than in some others. San Diego has no catcher, for instance. Kansas City has but two outfielders. But swapping and buying will resolve these and other shortages on the new teams before next April.

The new teams undoubtedly have acquired some established stars and some promising younger players. Montreal might have the best balanced club, as a guess looking over the new roster, but that's just a guess and all

"Hey," cried Satan to a new arrival, "you act as if you owned this place!"

"I do," came the reply, "my wife gave it to me before I came."

four new clubs have enough talent to field a team which might, on a given day, be unbeatable.

Fans in Canada, and in San Diego and Seattle, will have an opportunity to see the stars of other Major League teams for the first time, though they'll see their own division teams more than non-division teams. This new two-division system, in addition to new teams, will make 1969 a fresh and interesting season.
