How To Drive And Survive In Winter

New York (Naps) - Today, thousands of motorists keep a heavy load in the trunk for better traction, rub their windshields with lemon or onion for better vision, watch the braking lights on the car ahead as a stopping cue, and are wholly unaware that each of these actions can lead to death on winter highways.

If the load in your trunk is too heavy the front end will be higher than usual. The danger of this comes at night when your low beam headlights will look high to drivers coming the other way. Some of them may try to blind you to get even.

As for rubbing lemon or onion on the windshield to prevent icing, the National Safety Council says this: "Save the groceries for better use... they only make a mess on the glass. So do glycerin and beeswax. Commercial spray de-icers work well, but be sure to wipe your windshield dry after using them or hard-to-remove streaks may remain."

Can it really be a hazard to watch the braking lights on the car ahead to know when you should brake? Oddly, yes. There are more and more sports cars on the road, and many of the drivers enjoy slowing down by "gearing down" - switching to a lower gear - instead of using the brakes. Because of this, it's better to key-your moves to the distance between cars, rather than just to brake lights.

Good brakes are a must, but if one of them is better than the others, you may be in for trouble. If brakes aren't balanced - not just good - the "best" one may throw you into a skid.

Seeing as much as possible while driving would seem to be a good idea, but seeing too much - such as the sunlight reflected into your eyes by a patch of mirror-smooth ice - can literally blind you for several seconds, just long enough to travel several hun-ded feet. This is why it pays to have not just sunglasses, but glasses with polarized lenses. Cool-Ray Polaroid Sunglasses specialize in filtering out this type of glare while letting useful light reach your eyes so that, though the lenses are tinted, you actually see more instead of less.

Almost everyone knows that the best-traveled roads are the safest in winter, but in many areas everyone who "knows" this is wrong. At intersections especially, heavy traffic - starting and stopping - has a polishing effect on snow and ice. Result: it may take you twice the distance to stop at an intersection as it takes on an unplowed road.

Some driving "do's and don'ts" may DO you some good if you DON'T forget them.

DO remember to wipe the snow off your headlights every time you wipe it off the windshield.

DON'T let some air out of your tires in the hope of getting better traction. This doesn't work, says the National Safety Council, and it only makes your tires wear out sooner.

DO switch on your headlights when the sky gets very overcast.

DO keep safe glasses, such as the Cool-Ray Polaroid kind, handy in the glove compartment. Wear them during the day but DON'T wear them after the sun goes down.

DON'T slow down by gearing down without flashing your brake lights (not everyone has read this article).

DON'T think you're safer when the weather stops being so bitter cold; ice and snow are twice as slippery at 30 degrees as they are at zero.

DON'T drive when tired; a cup of coffee may mean 30 extra years of life.

DO make coffee the strongest drink you take before driving. After all, it's a great life - if you don't weaken.

Always be sure that, before signing any contract or concluding a business deal, you read the fine print.

'Canes Down Albemarle, 92-49

Louisburg's Hurricanes roared to a 47-21 halftime lead and continued the onslaught early in the second half as they whipped College of the Albemarle 92-49 last night in Holton Gymnasium. The visitors were ice cold in the first half, connecting on only 5 of 33 shots from the floor, and the 'Canes were hitting from all angles. Larry Paschall hit on 6 of 8 first half shots and Terry Davis pulled down twelve rebounds to lead the 'Canes' first half banage. With the 'Canes' starters playing eight minutes of the second half the score mounted to 72-27. At this point the subs came on to finish. The 'Canes used a zone defense to bottle up the Dolphins high scorer Jimmy Hodges. Hodges managed only seven points for the night as he could collect only one field goal. He went into the game averaging 26.1 points per game. Paschall finished the night with 24 points, hitting on eleven of thirteen from the floor and two for two from the line. Davis had 14 points, Bob Walker 11 and John Lewis 10. For the second game in succession the 'Canes hit well from the floor. The five starters hit on 30 of 62 field goal attempts for just under 50%. Davis, for the second game in a row, pulled down 20 rebounds. Against Chesapeake last Wednesday the 6'4" forward plucked 24 off the boards. The 'Canes record is now 4-0 in the conference and 11-4 for all games. On Thursday night the Louisburg five will play host to Chowan's Braves in another conference encounter. The Braves bring to town the leading scorer in the Cavalier-Tarheel Conference in William Brown, who has connected on better than 50% of his shots enroute to a league leading 27 points per game. Game time is 7:45.
