Win Raves At Teatime With Graham Nut Ring

At teatime, brunch or at your next coffee klatch, you are sure to win raves with this Yeast Risen Graham Nut Ring. It has a delicious graham flavor and is filled with raisins and chopped pecans.

A ring such as this deserves festive treatment, so bring out the good china and your silver service.

Yeast Risen Graham Nut Ring

3 cups Sunshine Graham Crumbs	1 cup butter
2 packages active dried yeast	2 eggs, lightly beaten
1/2 cup warm, not hot, water	4 cups sifted flour
1 cup milk, scalded	2 cups chopped pecans
1/2 cup sugar	1 teaspoon ground allspice
2 teaspoons salt	1 cup seedless raisins

Measure crumbs into 2-cup and 1-cup portions; set aside. Dissolve yeast in water. In a large bowl mix milk, 1/2 cup sugar, salt, and 1/2 cup butter that has been melted and cooled. Stir in eggs and yeast. Stir and beat in flour and the 2-cup portion of the crumbs; beat until smooth and elastic. Cover loosely and let rise in warm place, free of drafts, until double in bulk (about 1 1/2 to 2 hours). Combine pecans, the 1-cup portion of crumbs, remaining sugar and allspice. Set aside. When dough has doubled, beat down and stir in raisins. Pinch off dough and form into balls about 1 1/2 to 2 inches in diameter. Roll balls in melted and cooled remaining butter. Roll again in pecan-crumbs mixture. Place and pile up in a greased 10-inch slip-bottom tube pan. If any crumb mixture is left, sprinkle over top. Drizzle with any remaining butter. Cover loosely and let rise again until about doubled (about 45 minutes to an hour). When doubled, bake in preheated moderately hot oven (350°) for about 50 minutes or until ring shrinks from sides of pan. Let cool in pan on rack for about 20 minutes. Then carefully lift off sides of pan and let ring finish cooling on rack without separating it from the bottom of the pan. When fully cooled, remove the bottom. Slice to serve.

Yield: 16 generous servings.

About Your Home

The climate and soil of the South and the West Coast are so much like those of Southeastern China, the original home of Camellias. They can be grown in large pots and moved indoors during the winter in other sections.

You will have to provide them with a slightly acid soil. This soil is produced by the falling of leaves from hardwood trees in nature. They do best in filtered light, of the type that would fall on them through high shade trees.

Camellias will grow in full sun, however. In fact, they bloom more heavily in sun than in partial shade but there is always a danger of sun scald on the foliage.

To correctly prepare the soil for a camellia, remember that you are planting a shrub that will grow fifteen feet high or more during your lifetime. So dig a hole—at least three feet deep and five feet across.

Camellias are deep-rooted plants. They need a rich soil to support the large number of blossoms they produce each year.

When digging the hole, discard the sub-soil and bring in rich woods soil, if you can get it. If not, use your best garden soil, provided it has not been limed. The mixture you put back in the hole should be made up of two parts soil and three parts humus of some kind.

Keep the ground over the roots of your camellias mulched at all times. Use peat, leaf, mold or pine needles. Never cultivate the soil as they would destroy the surface roots.

Camellias need two feedings a year, especially when grown under trees. The first should come right after blooming. The second a month or six weeks later. Never feed camellias later than mid-June.

Poor Little Worm

It was her first silk dress and little Alice was simply overwhelmed. Her mother marked the occasion with an impromptu lecture on textiles. "You know dear," she began, "this beautiful dress was given us by a poor little worm."

"I know, mother," Alice replied, "Daddy's awfully generous, isn't he?"

In Fashion

When skirts begin to get longer we hope that the style of frills around the hemline will still be in style. This can add inches to a skirt's length.

Belts are very popular and multiple belts, even more so. Some of the women wear two or three belts around garments at the same time.

Buttons are good as a trimming. A sleeveless dress with high neckline may have a dozen or more buttons down the front of the garment.

Birth

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald T. Hudson of Route 3, Louisburg announce the birth of a girl, Rhonda May, January 15, 1969 at the Franklin Memorial Hospital. Mrs. Hudson is the former Alma Spencer.
