Your Mental Health

Part II

Morning Drinking

In some sections of early America, especially in the plantation southeast, it was customary to begin the day with an alcoholic drink. To my knowledge this custom has largely died out. Yet in a different form, that experienced by the alcoholic, it has become one of the chief warning signs of the possible presence of the illness of alcoholism.

Franklin Mem. Hospital Notes

The following were patients in the hospital Thursday morning:

When an individual discovers that he needs a drink to get him fit to start the day, he should examine his drinking habit closely. It may be that he is beginning to use alcohol as the alcoholic does—as a medicine.

There is no more miserable person than the alcoholic in a hangover. I can't truly describe the pain, the torment, and utter misery he goes through.

In the hangover, the alcoholic is miserably nauseated. His nerves are like razor-edges. He sweats. He trembles. He shakes so he can't control his hands. The condition is such that it is often called, "the shakes."

He's sick. Deathly sick. Then he makes a momentous discovery. He finds that the "medicine" he needs is the very liquid that helped bring on his misery—alcohol. He needs the numbing effects of an anesthetic-alcohol. It sedates the terribly upset stomach. It may get him into a normal enough shape and frame of mind that he can go to work.

For some alcoholics, though, these morning drinks are hard to keep down. They may be vomited back, time after time. Eventually one stays.

For some alcoholics, too, these morning drinks may be the beginning of another binge. And the sick, unhappy, miserable alcoholic is caught in a vicious circle of drinking. It may be that at this stage he is caught in a physical dependency on alcohol.

For additional information on the illness of alcoholism, visit or phone your local alcoholism information center or mental health center.

"Please" Is The Message Of The March Of Dimes

"Our March of Dimes message this year is a simple one: "Please."

"Please answer it early and please make your response generous. Mr. Ralph E. Beasley appealed today as he announced the traditional March of Dimes mailing to homes throughout Franklin County.

The need for funds is urgent, he said, if continued progress is to be made in reducing the figure of 250,000 babies born each year in the United States with birth defects.

"Already, March of Dimes-supported scientists have devised ways of detecting and controlling several conditions which can cause permanent mental disability, and they are now working in the field of German measles and other diseases known to be responsible for defective children."

While these preventive efforts are being pursued, declared Mr. Beasley, the March of Dimes is supporting a vast program of care and treatment designed to make useful living possible for victims of birth defects. It is being conducted at 103 treatment centers in American communities from coast to coast where trained experts provide comprehensive care, conduct clinical research to develop better methods of treatment, and help teach members of the medical and allied professions.

In North Carolina we have a treatment center in Chapel Hill, an evaluation center in Morganton and a research grant at Duke University.

"We know our March of Dimes message for support in the fight against birth defects will arrive promptly because we're cooperating with the Post Office Department by using zip codes on every envelope," declared Mr. Beasley, "and your contribution will zip back to us speedily for the same reason."

Coal Dust

The Government has recommended the first Federal standard to reduce coal dust, which causes an incurable lung disease blamed for more miners' deaths than accidents. The announcement was made after a 16-year study of the disease known among miners as "black lung."
