

Massengale Orchestra At College

One of the most popular dance orchestras in the Southeast will appear at Louisburg College Saturday, February 22, for the Inter-Club Council Formal Dance. Burt Massengale and his ten piece orchestra will play during the hours of 8:00 p.m. to 12 midnight in the B. N.

Duke College Union.

During recent years the Massengale band has played every leading country club in the Carolinas and Virginia, including the Starmount and Sedgefield Clubs in Greensboro, and the Charlotte, Meyers Park, and Carmel Clubs in Charlotte.

Local dance goers will have the opportunity to attend by purchasing tickets in advance from Dean of Students, Thomas A. Patterson's office at the college.

Youngsville Woman's Club Assists In Library

Youngsville - With three thousand books to be processed in the Youngsville High School Elementary library, members of the Youngsville Woman's Club are back in a familiar role of assisting library personnel with the task of speeding books onto the bookshelves.

During the past week the elementary students have had access to their library for the first time this school term, as it was previously necessary to use the space for a classroom. This was essential due to increased enrollment resulting from the consolidation of the two local schools.

As an additional mobile unit became available recently, the library is being rapidly re-activated with the cooperation of the librarian, aids, teachers, students and Woman's Club members. Eager students waiting to check out books are a great work incentive for helpers.

The stacks of books currently being processed were transferred from the other school which is now closed. Received with the books are numerous films and projectors to be catalogued. Books already in the library totaled 2000. Now volume is more than doubled. With combined efforts, approximately 1500 books were processed between Monday and Friday of the past week. Several clubwomen worked each day. Among those helping were Mesdames W. T. Holden, N. A. Brown, C. V. Timberlake, Robert Neeb, R. E. Cheatham, J. J. Hart, W. F. Mitchell and Ben Hudson.

Club work with the library began four years ago when the elementary library was established by the school with the assistance of clubmembers. At that time, scattered classroom books were compiled in a former classroom converted and equipped for a central library. Clubwomen assisted with re-processing and re-conditioning books then and have maintained aid as new books have been added.

Financially, the club has contributed fifty dollars each year toward the purchase of new books and equipment.

Hard At Volunteer Work

The most recent donation was a dictionary stand.

School teacher-librarian Mrs. W. F. Mitchell and teacher Mrs. Ben Hudson, who are both members of the Woman's Club, were instrumental in organizing the library and encouraged club participation in the initial endeavor. Club president at that time, Mrs. W. H. Fleming, promoted interest throughout her tenure of office in 1965-66 and urged that members accept this as a continuing project. In the first year of library operation, a total of twenty-two club members volunteered fifty-nine hours of service. Subsequent aid has been given as needed.

Now, with the mass of transfer books, clubwomen are putting in long hours to make books available as soon as possible.

Typewriters are clicking and file cards are flipping.

Paste pots and tape are out for mending, preparing books for proper lending.

Books are being classified and recorded on accession pages, by volunteer workers beginning to feel like experienced sages.

The hot printing stylus is in operation with an occasional "That Smarts" related; but all is rewarding service for those who have participated.

If this phrasing has taken on odd looks, it's from staring long at whimsical titles on some mod books.

For the younger students, teasing titles of light but enriching reading includes Parsifal the Poodley, Silly Billy, Arty the Smarty, and other reading equally appealing.

Actually, there is a broad variety of books both attractive and beneficial to all elementary ages. Books are carefully and purposefully selected to fulfill student needs. The library contains volumes of the highest reading quality as well as encyclopedias, reference books and current materials; all properly filed to qualify it as a standard central library for an accredited school.
