Backyard Living

Raleigh - Backyard living can be inviting, especially when there's outdoor lighting to extend yard usefulness for

"But be sure the lighting you use is safe, advises Mrs. Edith McGlamery, extension housing and house furnishings specialist, North Carolina State University. "Indoor lighting equipment was not meant to withstand the rough and ready needs of outdoor

For instance, Mrs. Mc-Glamery says, you need to watch the light bulbs you choose for use outdoors. You have a choice of protecting the bulb with some type of cover or of buying a bulb that you know will withstand water and resist breakage.

Specially developed withstand outdoor weather are the projector bulbs molded of heavy heat-resistant glass. These bulbs have the initials "PAR" on them. They can be used for outdoor flood or spot lighting and need no protective cover

Regular bulbs of very low wattage, around 15 to 25 watts, may also be used without protection.

Most other types of bulbs need some sort of covers when used out-of-doors. Cone-shaped spot and flood light covers are one style. Usually these are on swivel holders that stake into the ground or clamp onto trees or may be permanently attached to a post or a building.

Also, there is the smart, modern looking mushroom style with its wide "hat" that forces all the light downward, giving a good view of steps and walks. And there are decorative garden units and hanging lanterns that keep the light source hidden from
