Nutrition-On-Wheels

Homemakers in Durham, Orange and Person counties recently had a chance to gather some hints on how to tone down the money-hungry bell of the grocery store cash register.

A mobile exhibit bearing the caption, "Make Shopping a Ball," traveled through the three counties in October.

The nutrition-on-wheels display, sponsored by the Family Living Committee of the North Central Area Development Association, challenged homemakers to ease the tension of food shopping by planning meals in advance to save time, energy and money.

According to Mrs. Mary J. Whitmore, assistant home economics Extension agent, Durham County, many young homemakers lack skills in food buying. In many instances, day-by-day and between meal shopping results in food waste, unnecessary spending and wasted time and energy, she points out.

What's Her Name?

When an Extension home economics agent is being introduced, and the person can't remember what her last name is-the result is this: "Oh, she works for the Extension Service in the County Building where they can answer all questions on everything from food, poisons, cleaning, family planning, clothes, management, and what have you."

In this case, "what's her name" was Mrs. Jane L. Ebert, home economics Extension agent, Davidson

Mrs. Ebert concludes "it's just as flattering being known for your profession as it is being known by name."

Apples What She Learned

"Everything I have learned at Extension Homemaker's club meetings pertaining to housing is helping me a lot," states Mrs. Jack Mashburn, Macon County.

Mr. and Mrs. Mashburn are in the process of remodeling their house, observes Mrs. Jessie D. Cabe, home economics Extension agent, and information gleaned at meetings has been helpful in the remodeling of the kitchen and in the planning of the eating and serving areas.

Mrs. Mashburn says the knowledge of planning the arrangement of definite work centers as well as specific space allowances and clearances has been most helpful.

Tries Something New

Mrs. Ada Jenkins, one of four nutrition aides in Columbus County, found a way to reach several persons with the same information.

Instead of making five individual visits, she decided to get homemakers in the Evergreen community together and present information on the importance of milk in the diet to several at one time.

The aide planned a birthday party for an elderly homemaker with whom she had been working and invited some of the other community members.

The homemakers enjoyed their group lesson and hope to meet together again for more discussions, Mrs. Yvonne B. Ray, home economics Extension agent, notes.

Churches And Credit

Vergennes, Vt. -- Anyone visiting the Congregational Church here will find a credit card machine just inside the door. The idea is to keep up with the times by praying now and paying later. The pastor of the church is the town mayor, a certified public accountant and an attorney.

Mother's Darling

The possibility of a landslide so intimidated the inhabitants of a little village that one couple decided to send their son, aged 9, to an uncle until the danger had passed. Three days later they received a telegram: "Am retërning boy. Please send landslide instead."

About Your Home

There are any number of ways of creating a friendly atmosphere in the rooms of a home. One sure-fire way is to do it with books.

Colorfully jacketed books can even be used to call attention to some particularly beautiful piece of furniture by building a simple frame of bookshelves around it. Bookshelves are quite often used as the all important center of interest in small rooms, in period rooms or in modern rooms. Books, are at home in any type of surroundings.

Dress a window by removing draperies or curtains that may shut out the sun and build bookshelves at either side of the casing. Bookshelves can be used to divide one room into two-such as a dining alcove from the living room, a bed alcove or a study alcove from some other room.

Give color to a dull-looking wall panel with shooks

ing wall panel with books shelves. A most attractive way to decorate this type of bookshelf is to break the horizontal line of books by placing on the shelf several trailing plants and other bits of color.

Bookshelves are a perfect
