NARRATIVE.

Political Matters in the First District—Accessions from Radical Elements—Congressman Yeates and His Campaign with Lindsey.

[Correspondence of the Sentinel.]

PITT COUNTY, Sept. 9, 1876.

The Raleigh Sentinel, under its present management, is well worthy of the cognomen, "The Democratic Organ of North Carolina," and being so, its columns, I presume, are open to the communications of democrats from all parts of the State. A large portion of the readers of the Raleigh papers are but little acquainted with the section in which I reside, either politically or industrially. It is not my purpose to speak at present of the natural advantages of this, the eastern portion of the State, but it is to:

THE POLITICAL CONDITION AND PROSPECTS.

I would direct attention. At no time since the war have our people been more awake to the importance of harmonious action, vigilant and unceasing labor in the good cause of reform and democracy than in this campaign. The democrats of this district are arrayed in one solid, unbroken phalanx; no clamorous complaints of the captain and standard-bearers are heard, no disaffection prevails in our midst. The ranks are unbroken, save when we halt to arrange more room for the republican opponents and prodigals who are returning from the evil of their ways, not a few of whom have been conscientious republicans ever since the war. Truly, Captain Settle has inspired them with a love for desertion; he has justified it, denigrated that he is, simply on grounds of policy, and after the 7th of November he will doubt exceedingly the wisdom of his advocacy of desertion. He will be, I should think, styled

DOUBTING THOMAS THE SECOND.

The people are enthusiastic over Vane and Jarvis. They will poll the whole strength of the party, and not one single vote will fall behind the full strength of the honest portion of this district. And Major Yeates—what shall I say of him? He who, in 1874, so nobly and so ably crushed a Cobb, hardened by the effluent rays of infamy which Beasly Butler, his son, his light, his god, shined upon him. He who has been the

of this district have had since the good old times. He who has won, deservedly won innumerable plaudits from the people of this district, this state, this Union, for his courageous, truthful and eloquent vindication of the honest men whom Cobb misrepresented in congress, and the impeachment of the party who alone can promote and honor and develop such men. I withhold my say. The whole people will speak out on the 12th of Tuesday in November: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou again into the halls of congress." But Yeates has an adversary. Yes, Falconer John's satellite, John Pool's pirate friend, U. S. Grant's faithful (?) whisky assessor and holder of seized brandy which suited his taste, J. McDonald Lindsey, whom Pool recommended as "A GOOD TOOL FOR LOSING MEN."

I never knew Pool so sagacious, I never considered him such a good physician, mist until since Lindsey's nomination by the radicals for congress. He is indeed a good (?) man, the very person, to lose honest men. Already he has lost at least one hundred good honest republican men and their votes, and instead of the briny deep, Major J. J. Yeates and the democratic party have received and swallowed them up. Jubilate Deo!

At every discussion these candidates for congress have had, Maj. Yeates has sustained his reputation as an eloquent, frugal and logical speaker. He has told the people what the republican party has done, and what he has done since he went to congress (and his is truly a noble record), and he has shown up his opponent, snowed him under, annihilated him by relating to the mass of hearers what everywhere greet the candidates which be, Lindsey, has done and is doing and tried to do. The people listen, they deliberate, they shout, and the bloody shirt; let Yeates' standard be unfurled! Let the flag of peace, reform, and honesty wave; victory it does inspire and victory we will win.

"DOWN WITH THE BLACK FLAG"

At Greenville, on the 7th, Yeates and Lindsey addressed the people of our county. Lindsey spoke an hour and thirty minutes; three-fourths of his time he devoted to his character, attempting to prove by letters from his school-boy friends that he was not a murderer, and efforts to explain his connection with a certain two barrels of brandy, which a lady swears he appropriated to his own use while assistant assessor, and which belonged to the government. As I gazed into his eyes the words of Shakespeare recurred:

"Trust not those cunning waters of his eyes For villainy is not without such rheum, And he long treaded in it, makes it seem Like rivers of remorse and innocence."

Major Yeates made as good a speech as I ever heard, knocked down Lindsey's slim defence, and showed him and his party to the people in all their deformity and leprosy. In my next I will speak of our legislative and electoral candidates.

CAPTAIN SETTLE.

YOUNG, CAPTAIN SETTLE.

I'm Captain Settle of the court supreme, And always fed on cake and cream, Till, in a mad secession dream, I joined the rebel army. At first I ate Confederate tack, And thought I never would go back, Nor make a single homeward track, Before the yankee army.

(SPEAK.)

Yes, I longed for military glory, and determined to fight for fame; but when blue-coat soldiers swarmed thick as "red-legged grass hoppers," and showered their bullets like hail among us, matters assumed a serious shape, and the prospect was not inviting.

(SING.)

To Captain Settle of the court supreme, Who always fed on cake and cream, Till in a mad secession dream He joined the rebel army.

II.

When Vance went home to navigate The grand and glorious ship of state, Then mine was but a doubtful fate, While in the rebel army. So from the foe I turned my face, And moving at a lively pace, I hunted up a bomb-proof place Out of the rebel army.

(SPEAK.)

I was elected solicitor, prosecuted those who harbored deserters, and convicted a woman in Randolph of feeding her own husband; I was bound by my oath to do this, and if I had resigned, "the war governor would have laid his fingers on me, and Mallett would have put me in a castle-car and sent me to the front," where the climate was too warm.

(SING.)

For Captain Settle of the court supreme, Who always fed on cake and cream, Till in a mad secession dream He joined the rebel army.

III.

But Lee laid down his glittering sword, And Sherman brought his hungry horde, With all his fire and fury poured On the routed rebel army. As might was right, I turned my coat, And using all the negro vote, A brand-new constitution wrote, Under Canby's army.

(SPEAK.)

Falling to win freedom, we all became traitors, and exhausted by African odors and the kuklux war, I recruited my health on fragrant breezes fresh from the guano hills of peevish Fern. Now the war governor is not the man to steer the ship of state through a tempest of peace; but a softer nest and better pay will be a grateful boon.

(SING.)

To Captain Settle of the court supreme, Who always fed on cake and cream, Till in a mad secession dream He joined the rebel army.

BEN. HILL ON THE ELECTION.

[Cit. Commercial Correspondence.] Ben. Hill was interviewed recently on politics, state and national, by Dr. Redfield. The last part of the conversation was on the presidency. Hill speaks out boldly:

"What of the presidency?" "Well, I believe Tilden will be elected, although no man can say the contest is free from doubt. It promises to be close, but the chances now seem decidedly in favor of Tilden."

"What effect would his election have in the south?"

"A very fine effect. It would restore confidence, promote a general love of country, reconstruct in deed as well as in name, and make the people feel so bright that all branches of business would feel the reviving effects."

"What if Hayes should be chosen?" "Under Tilden the south would be happy. Under Hayes she would be quill. It is but fair to say that Hayes was least objectionable to southern people of any candidate before the Cincinnati convention. Perhaps I should qualify this by mentioning Bristow. Bristow is well thought of here. But Hayes is so much better a man than either Blaine or Morton, that his selection had a very quieting effect in the south. Had either Blaine or Morton been chosen it would have appeared as an eternal declaration of hate toward the south. The southern people would have been discouraged, with no near prospect of genuine reconstruction. There would have been three elements in the Cincinnati convention, a good element, a bad element, and a negative element. The first wanted Bristow, the second wanted Hayes, and the third was an element of hearers which everywhere greet the candidates who be, Lindsey, has done and is doing and tried to do. The people listen, they deliberate, they shout,

"DOWN WITH THE BLACK FLAG"

and the bloody shirt; let Yeates' standard be unfurled! Let the flag of peace, reform, and honesty wave; victory it does inspire and victory we will win.

That our readers may see with what favor our paper is received by our editorial brethren, we give below a few extracts embracing "what they say" of us:

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

[Newbern Times, Rep.] The leading democratic paper is the state.

[Tolmest Transcript.] The Raleigh Sentinel under its new management and proprietors is greatly improved, and is now one of our most valued exchanges.

[Richmond, (Va.) White.] The Raleigh Sentinel publishes a six page weekly, the largest and handsomest paper we have seen printed in North Carolina. It shows enterprise and thrift, the result of good management and live transfer.

[Wilson Advance.] The Raleigh Sentinel under its new management fulfills the promise previously made that as a newspaper it should be made equal to what it ever was before. It is in good hands as its every column testifies, ably edited and on the right tract.

[Vicksburg (Miss.) Herald.] The Raleigh Sentinel needs no eulogy from us. Every one that reads it knows how it stands on all important topics of the day, and although every man differs with it, yet all can say that it is sincere in its course, and is working for the best interest of the people of North Carolina.

[Goldsboro Messenger.] The Raleigh Sentinel, under its present able management shows a decided improvement. Edited with marked ability, its general make up and typographical appearance is excellent. We wish the new management every success.

[Hickory Press.] We are glad to herald the appearance again of that useful democratic journal, the Raleigh Sentinel. It has passed into entirely new hands, and there is evidently some one about who knows how to prepare something readable, for every issue teems with news and democratic soundness.

[From the Salem Press.] The Raleigh Sentinel, under the new management has been much improved in manner and matter. We have been in regular receipt of the Daily Sentinel for a week or more, and hope its daily visits will continue. Specimen numbers can be seen at the office. Price of the Daily $5 per annum.

[From the Fayetteville Wide-Awake.] The Sentinel, the name of which has been a terror to radicalism since Holden pledged "the last dollar and the last man" to the support of the Confederate States government, has passed into new hands, and is assuming an attitude from which it will hurl many a destructive canister into radical ranks.

[Greensboro Masonic Journal.] The Raleigh Sentinel came to us last Wednesday morning a morning daily and decidedly improved. The new management and editor promise to do better in the future, and present a better paper than the initial number. They may perhaps do it, but we can't see much chance for improvement. Gentlemen, we wish you success.

[Robesonian.] The Raleigh Sentinel, under the present management, is very generally improved. It contains as much readable matter as heretofore, and is one of the very best daily papers in this state. In common with a great many people of this state we favor the management of the Sentinel, and will always learn of its prosperity with pride and pleasure. They have reduced the rates for the campaign, as will be seen in another column.

[Murphy Herald.] The Sentinel is a living exponent of democracy, and a firm supporter of the restoration, to preserve the necessity of restoring both state and national government to the guidance of the democratic party. Under its present able management it takes an enviable position among the best journals in the land, increasing its former prominence by its name, by maintaining the highest degree of efficiency. Every democrat in the mountains should take it, and every republican who does not desire an addition wrinkle to his brow, should shun it for its persuasive arguments entail thought. With better mail facilities, Murphy would contribute to the support of the Daily Sentinel, and this assertion is based on the extensive circulation enjoyed by the Herald's copy.

HILLSBORO RECORDER. ESTABLISHED 1820. THE OLDEST PAPER IN NORTH CAROLINA.

The RECORDER, apart from its political merits, offers superior inducements to the merchants of Raleigh as a medium of advertising. It has a large and increasing circulation in the counties of Orange, Alamance, Person and Caswell and especially in those sections of Orange and Alamance, most closely connected by the interests of trade with the city of Raleigh. The merchants of Raleigh will find it vastly to their advantage through this medium to build up a metropolitan wholesale trade, and enter upon Raleigh the business that goes to other states.

Manufacturers will also profit by the growing spirit of agricultural improvement, and the tendency to the adoption of labor-saving machinery, to reach the ears and eyes of a large and intelligent class of readers through the medium of the Recorder.
