Every man should be the father of his own character.

Everything is to be local this winter, instead of buttoned.

We are still looking for that rain old probabilities promised us.

You can't turn a corner or walk a square, now, without seeing the fashionable cardinal red.

New members will be enrolled in the mechanics and workmen's Tilden and Vance club to-night.

The man with the linen duster attracted some attention yesterday, but old summer still clings to us.

Col. P. Down, of the SENTINEL, editorial staff, left for the centennial yesterday to be gone several days.

Sunday and Monday, October 22 and 23, were set apart as days of prayer for Sunday schools throughout the world.

The demand for shell oysters would probably be a little more active if the weather were a little cooler, but as it is dealers in the bivalves seem to be doing a thriving business.

A doting young father boasts that his baby son is so affectionate that he sits up with his parents nearly all night, and is so tough that he seems to have no conception of fatigue or of the time of day.

Fruit is plentiful on the fruit stands, and apparently the dealers are doing a very fair business in a small way. Good, ripe fruit is said to be an excellent medium of stomach absorption for malarial deposits, and the eating of it is generally advised by nearly everybody.

Wonderful Death of An Infant.

It is the little infant in death that all heaven seems to surround when it dies. And when dead, it is God's own statutory left just long enough with its beautiful body that never knew a sin, decked in pure white flowers, to tell of the spirit that has fluttered and flown, to be God's page on high, in carrying his misdeeds through heaven. It is an honor to elect a man's child page in the halls of congress, but a greater honor than that is to have him a messenger with the Master. An infant died near Milton the other day that was gifted with speech in the hour of its death. It's mother, a worthy farmer's good wife, had just died and left it, a weak, helpless, little babe, dependent on the bottle. Only a few months of age it soon began to weaken and die, and in the fatal hour when friends surrounded it, and the last gasp was watched for, it lifted its little hands and with the last breath cried, "my mother!"

This is no fancy sketch but is the talk of the neighborhood. And after all, it is so wonderfully strange when we reflect that death of itself is the strangest of all things!

Destroyed by Fire.

Tuesday night about 1 o'clock the tannery of E. G. Lewis, situated on Pigeon House branch, about two miles from this city, was destroyed by fire. We understand that about $500 worth of dressed leather, together with the machinery, in fact, everything was burned. It is thought to have been the work of an incendiary.

Democratic Flag Raising.

This evening at 4 p. m., there will be a splendid flag raising by the central Tilden and Vance club on their pole 140 feet high, at the corner of Fayetteville and Martin streets. The mechanics club has been invited to be present and we hope to see them out in full strength. Prominent gentlemen will make short addresses. Let us all attend.

Democrats of First Ward in Council.

The democratic conservative voters of first ward assembled at Metropolitan hall last night in full force and organized for work. Graham Haywood was elected president of the club, and in taking the chair, explained the object of the meeting in a short and appropriate manner. J. B. Arendell was elected secretary, and the president was authorized to appoint such committees as were necessary to place the club in working order. The meeting then adjourned subject to the call of the president.

Grand Rally of the Working Men.

There will be a grand mass meeting of the mechanics and workmen of Raleigh and vicinity to-night at Metropolitan hall, under the auspices of the Mechanics' Tilden and Vance club. The meeting will be addressed by C. M. Basbee and others. Turn out and see these men, the bone and sinew of the country, whom the radicals and their organs like the Constitution call

REGIONS ON HORSEBACK.

This afternoon the Mechanics' Tilden and Vance club will turn out to assist at the raising of the democratic pole at the corner of the citizens bank.

Mrs. General Ramsour.

The widow of the gallant Ramsour, who was the spirit and life of the general's home near Milton, as gentle, and modest and beautiful, as she was in her maiden days. Mrs. Ramsour is pleasant and cheerful in society, but still dressed in the deepest mourning, and with the vanities and show of this gay and giddy life she has nothing to do, but amid the quiet of her country home she has devoted herself to the education of her daughter who promises to rival the mother in all the accomplishments that adorn a woman. Mrs. Ramsour was a Miss Richmond.

Mayor's Court Wednesday.

The usual routine of cagey drunks was reported, though the number was not so large as in the past few days, only two reporting. One was rather obstreperous and he paid a fine of $5, and the other was content to remain in the guardhouse twelve hours.

Marcellus Alford, alias Tusk, colored, was arraigned for stealing a shoulder of meat, and the evidence was such that his case was referred to a higher court. Tusk would have gone to jail, but Judge Banting came to his rescue and became his security.

Greely Milligan and Stokes Crump, both colored, were up for an affray, but the trial was postponed until to-day.

William H. Ferguson.

This gentleman so well and favorably known to the good people of our city, is developing rare skill as a caricaturist. We have just seen a caricature from his pencil representing the condition of the "gubernatorial race" in North Carolina.

In the foreground of this picture Judge Settle is depicted in the shape of a horse. On his back is seated a negro who carries before him a broken box, typical of the busted freedman's bank and the basket of civil right in which are deposited two children, one white and one black, while behind the negro is the band of radical corruption, on which is perched the official vulture. The negro is saying "git up sah, what I feed you fer but to tote me." The horse tail has been tied by Jo Turner to the stake "Peru" and old Jo standing by the stake with his arms folded, is saying "it will take some cuss words to slip this knot." Under the feet of the horse is trampled the constitution. On one side of the track in front of Judge Settle stands an Abbie House, who is advising his honor to stop and unload, and on the other stands Ike Young who is prevented by prudential motives from investing in this enterprise.

Far up the homestretch another horse with a face bearing a marvellous resemblance to that of Job Vance, trots placidly along, bearing on his back the goddess justice and heading straight for the capital, which with the inscription "welcome Zeb" over its door looks as it will look on the 1st day of next January. There are various other figures in the picture - which we have not space to notice.

The cart capture is on exhibition and we believe copies are on sale at Watson's gallery.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

A Stage Coach Containing Maj. Engelhard and Many Ladies Precipitated Down a Precipice Fifty Feet.

[Special Dispatch to the Raleigh Sentinel.]

HENRY, N. C., Oct. 23, 1876. Last evening just after dark, the lead horses of the stage from Asheville became unmanageable on the mountain two miles from here, and jumped headlong down a precipice fifty feet, dragging the other horses and the stage with them. Mr. Nutt and wife, Mrs. Wm. Parsley and daughters, Mrs. M. P. Taylor and children, and Maj. Engelhard, all of Wilmington, and Mrs. Brasher, of Tennessee, were passengers. Mr. Nutt, Maj. Engelhard and Miss Parsley on top. Maj. Engelhard got the young ladies off—jumping off with one—and assisted those inside to alight just as the stage fell over the precipice—one horse holding the stage up a moment after the other three were dangling in the air, gave necessary time to save the lives of all.

The Vance Ball at Kinston.

The popularity of Governor Vance among ladies is something almost unprecedented. Even the wives and daughters of the republicans would, if they had the household vote to throw, give their suffrage to this gallant gentleman.

The ball at the Lenoir house in Kinston, on Monday night last, was given in Vance's honor. The Sentinel correspondent was present, and saw so many sweet and pretty ladies that he became quite bewildered in the labyrinthian maze of beauty in which he was involved. Beauty to the right of him, beauty to the left, beauty before him, beauty in rear of him, and beauty all around him.

The honorary managers were Hon. John F. Wooten, Gen. W. F. Loftin, A. J. Loftin, S. B. West, George Dall and John Murphy. The following were the floor managers: John Newbern, Junius Stevenson, A. S. Patrick, Herbert West, Solomon Outtinger, John P. Harkett, Jim Lassiter, J. G. Cox, William Hunter and John Brown.

The music was admirably done by a volunteer band of gentlemen of the city. Among the fair ones who participated in the dancing were: Miss Sue McCallen, Miss Ella Herring, Miss Beela Stevenson, Miss Fanny Wooten, Miss Ella Gray, Miss Mary E. Wadsworth, Mrs. Lucy D. Brown, Miss Willie Ann Ennis, Miss Fanny Archfield and Miss Tempe Herring.

The flying feet of the gay ones chased away the hours till there was only one hour left, to-wit: 1 A. M. It was a realized "dream of fair women" and brave men.

The Sentinel reporter especially returns his thanks to Mr. John Brown, of Kinston, for his polite and courteous attentions during all of this most enjoyable evening.

Raising Money in a Country Church—A Liberal Family.

New Hope is the name of a good little country church in Caswell county, about four miles from the pleasant little town of Milton. Last Sunday a large congregation had assembled and the collection was taken up for superannuated preachers. Preacher Jenkins went about it in this style:

"My friends" said he, "we will now take up a subscription for the superannuated preachers of this church, and we need twenty dollars. Who'll give five dollars?" "I'll give five dollars," answered a member.

"Brother Henry Thacker gives five dollars God bless him!" announced the preacher, "who else will give five dollars?" There was a long and solemn pause.

"Who'll give us two dollars and a half?" said the preacher with more energy.

"I'll give two dollars and a half!" said a member.

"Brother Lee Thacker gives two dollars and a half, God bless him!" announced the preacher; "who else will give us the same?" and he looked around and waited.

The church sat as still as a mouse.

"Who'll give us two dollars?" said the preacher, and his eye brightened.

"I'll give you two dollars!" said a very fine voice.

"Sister Thacker gives us two dollars, God bless her!" exclaimed preacher Jenkins, and he then requested inasmuch as one family had subscribed nearly half of the needed amount that brother Henry Thacker and Dr. Lee would wait on the congregation with pencil and paper and see if they couldn't get the balance.

After a deal of "going around," and after, at the request of the preacher, brother Lee Thacker had also supplied himself with pencil and paper and was assisting the other two—the result was read out from the pulpit, only $5 70, as subscribed by the entire congregation. The Thackers had given it all. But the thing that most pleased the angels was an old poor woman in the corner who didn't know how to write her name, and she handed a copper cent to one of the brothers as he went flying around with his pencil and paper.

VANCE AT KINSTON.

HIS WELCOME BY THE DEMOCRACY OF THE NEUSE VALLEY.

LADIES GREET HIM AS THE DELIVERER OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Immense Outpouring of the People of Lenoir, Greene, Wayne and Craven—Ladies on the Platform—Great Speech of the Incoming Governor.

(From our special Correspondent.)

Kinston, Oct. 23, 1876. Governor Vance and party left Newbern for this beautiful rural village at 5:40 a. m., arriving at 8 o'clock. A large crowd met him at the depot of the Atlantic and North Carolina railroad. The Greenville Cornet Band was in attendance. A horseman bore a large United States flag. When Governor Vance left the cars, the multitude opened ranks forming two long parallel lines, ten deep on each side, facing inwards. Profound silence was maintained till Vance appeared at the foot of this double line. Then three sky-rocketing cheers arose, as if with the voice of one man and a giant. Gov. Vance's carriage was escorted through the main streets of the town to the hotel by a cavalcade of mounted men, followed by a long procession in vehicles and on foot. The ladies thronged the porches and crowded the windows of every house, waving white handkerchiefs in token of welcome to the coming of the great liberator of North Carolina. It was an oration such as a Bolivar or a Napoleon might envy. Shortly after reaching the hotel, Gov. Vance, accompanied by Hon. John F. Wooten, appeared upon the balcony, in response to the unadmitted wish of the assembled multitude. He said nothing. His noble presence was sufficient of itself. Bowing in courteous acknowledgment of the warm applause that greeted him, he retired to his room, where for upwards of an hour he received his friends, white and colored, and shook hands with them. A similar reception was held a little later at the office of Col. Wooten, the democratic elector for the second congressional district.

The stand for the speaking was erected at the south end of the Lenoir county court-house. It was draped in pure white, beautifully festooned with cedar, ivy, holly and other evergreens, brightened here and there with flowers. A standard at one corner of the platform bore the legend:

VANCE, THE PEOPLE'S CHOICE.

Opposite this was a magnificent American flag. On the stand were a number of the oldest citizens of the county, whose venerable forms and heads white with the frosts of many winters, gave an impressive dignity to the occasion. Hundreds of beautiful ladies, maids and matrons, added to Vance's reception the attractiveness of their glorious charms. In the rear of the stand, and immediately fronting the court-house, was the band-wagon, handsomely decorated. The crowd numbered fully 3,000. Many citizens were present from Greene, Wayne, Jones, Onslow and Craven.

HIS SPEECH.

Governor Vance was introduced by Col. Wooten. He commenced by saying that in the absence of his competitor he was like a blacksmith beating the anvil without any iron.

Gov. Vance's first proposition was that it was necessary to make a change in the administration of the state and national governments. This was indicated by the political axiom laid down in all our American bills of rights that frequent elections are needful to the preservation of popular freedom. That axiom is based upon the idea that opportunity for a change of parties should be given to the people.

The fallacy of supporting Hayes as a change from Grant was clearly shown. It is a duck before two ducks, a duck behind two ducks, and a duck between two ducks. The republican party came into power on 4th March, 1861, and has had a longer lease of power than any other in our history. What has it done, and what is its history, and its present attitude?

Constitutions are made for the protection of minorities against the tyranny of majorities. They are intended to secure the rights of the weak against the strong, and to maintain the liberties of the individual citizen.

The republican party is the legitimate descendant of the old abolition party, which used to discard the constitution, bible, the church, and even God himself.

Six months after congress solemnly declared that it had no purpose to interfere with slavery, Lincoln issued his proclamation of emancipation, thereby giving the lie to the professions of his party.

When the war ended, we of the south were still in the Union. We had not fought our way out, and were held by all departments of the federal government to be still in the Union. Congress passed an act dissolving the very Union they had fought four years for, spent billions of dollars and sacrificed thousand of lives to maintain.

They passed another act providing, after putting us out, how we might come back. They wanted us to come back, if we came at all, as radicals. They wanted us to play the part of the prodigal son, but when we got home, we were marched around the chimney of the great house right along into the kitchen. The Louisiana infamy was then detailed and commented upon at length. This re-construction action was most flagrantly violative of the constitution. Chief justice Waite has decided that these acts of congress attempting to regulate suffrage in the states were unconstitutional. For this, however, the radical care nothing. The radical administration has never hesitated to pass the barriers of constitution and laws when party exigencies required it. The anomaly now prevailing in South Carolina was graphically portrayed. The multitudinous arrests now being made in that state, evince a fixed purpose not to allow a fair and free election. And here in North Carolina, John Pool declares in public speeches that if Tilden is elected by the vote of a solid south, the south will not suffer his inauguration.

The governor spoke at length upon the subject of taxation and corrupt and extravagant expenditures of the people's money. The best government in the world is that which is cheapest. When money abundantly in the treasury there will be much more abuse. Radicalism has inaugurated a corruption, a venality, a misappropriation of the public funds, unparalleled in history. Jobbery, rings, speculation, fraud, have fattered upon the federal treasury. The relations of the radical breach was illustrated by the story of the boy and the codfish ball at the hotel. From 1789 to 1861—72 years—1,581 million dollars covered the entire expense of the general government. In the 44 years since the cost has been 5,220 millions or—leaving out the 4 years of the war—2,034 millions in the last 10 years.

In the whole course of Vance's speech he made no statements of either facts or figures at all varying from those made by him in the least discussions throughout the state with Judge Settle. The speech was eminently honest, vigorous and fair; and it impressed its hearers as such.

In characterizing the 40,000 internal revenue officers, Vance said they could look at a man's track in the sand and tell whether he was totting a quart or a four-gallon jug. They can smell your breath at 10 o'clock a. m., and tell whether the dram you took before breakfast was tax-paid or not. The "designated assistant United States internal revenue assessors," appointed in 1872 in North Carolina, at $3 per day were commissioned for the express purpose of aiding the radicals in their campaign; and the people had to pay the cost of them. A diminutive but fat and portly specimen of these gentry was exhibited in the form of a red-legged, Nebraska corn-eating grasshopper, corried up in a phial and up to his chin in whisky, his congenial element.

North Carolina was pre-eminently an agricultural state, having but little commercial or manufacturing interest as compared with other states. Upon communities thus mainly made up of farmers, the weight of taxation always falls most heavily.

The only reply of the radicals to the charges of corruption and malfeasance in "war! war! war!" Is it any reason that you should support thieves because I and my friends were war men? Vote for Tilden and Hendricks. A change may help, but cannot hurt us. If the men the democrats put in power go back on you, turn them out. Keep turning out and turning out until you get honest men in office—till you get men who will give us a good government—men who will fear the people if not the Lord.

Governor Vance then paid his regards to the injuries reports which had been circulated against him; such as that he had a woman hanged to get her money when Confederate currency was worth about 500 to one in specie. No order of his ever sanctioned cruelty. He had challenged a vigorous scrutiny of his adjutant general's order book. That book could not be found in Raleigh. It had disappeared. He next spoke of the "garbled letters," and said "I am proud of my war record. I only wish you and all men could see it all. It shows that I steadfastly maintained the civil authority as paramount to the military power wherever and whenever they came in conflict. During the four years of our civil war, but two American governors did this. They were Horatio Seymour, of New York, and myself. I told Jeff. Davis, through Secretary Seldon, that in the absence of any supreme court of the Confederate States, the decisions of the supreme court of North Carolina were law to me; and that if they were not respected I would call upon the militia of my state to enforce them, and further that I would issue a proclamation recalling the North Carolina troops from Louisiana.

Towards the close, Governor Vance addressed a few earnest and manly words to the colored people present. He told an anecdote of the man who gave his hands water-means to fill them up before meal time so as to save meat and bread; also of the little Guinea nigger he met in Yaddin who had "taken notice that the democratic niggers always wore the best breeches."

Governor Vance mentioned incidentally that this was his 69th speech in sixty-five counties of the state during this canvass. The same enthusiasm had been witnessed everywhere. There had been nothing like it since Governor Morehead's campaign in 1849, when he spoke almost daily from March to November.

Governor Vance spoke two hours and a quarter, closing amidst immense applause. A fragrant and beautiful banquet was presented to him on behalf of the ladies of Lenoir. Other bouquets then came up informally. The band struck up an inspiring air, and the great crowd gradually broke up and dispersed.

The Political Situation in South Carolina.—A Fair Election Demanded—Troops to Protect Colored Democrats. [Special dispatch to Baltimore Sun.]

CHARLESTON, S. C., October 23.—Both sides recognize the fact that the result of the election in South Carolina hinges upon Charleston county. The heavy majority Hampton will get in the upper portion of the state will be offset by the solid black vote on the coast, so that the large vote of Charleston county will suffice to turn the scale. The county has hitherto been regarded as a republican stronghold, having about 22,000 voters, of whom only 7,000 are whites.

In the past the democrats have been particularly successful in the city elections, but have made no attempt to carry the county against the dense black population on the adjacent sea islands, who are under the absolute sway of Sheriff Bowen, the ex-congressman, whose record is well known in the courts of Washington. But in this campaign the democrats have succeeded in inducing a considerable majority of the island blacks to support Hampton. Violent intolerance prevails on the islands, and the republican negroes say that they will kill every negro who attempts to vote the democratic ticket.

The proclamation of the governor and president cut off hope of protection for the black democrats and from the city rifle clubs, and unless a squad of federal troops can be had for every polling place in Charleston county outside of the city, Chamberlain will secure sufficient majority here to insure his re-election.

A committee of prominent democrats, consisting of ex-gov. Aiken, ex-gov. Magrath and ex-gov. Dession, are to Columbia to-morrow morning to urge on Gen. Ruger, in the interest of fairness and peace, such a distribution of troops at the polls.
