The noterious General Judson B.

Kilpatrick, whose exploits al-out Greensboro' in 1865 are still a memory of disgust to the good citizens of that region, and who has lately come into additional disrepute as the author of "the bloodyshirt campaign with money," is in this city under peculiar, if not suspicious, circumstances.

He came in on the Raleigh & Gaston train from Weldon yesterday evening. having left Washington City at 2:40 in tion, in government; while we are far the morning. He was accompanied by one man, and on the arrival of the train, they slid out of the car instanter and, avoiding hacks, omnibuses and all other public conveyances, struck out on foot by the shortest cut for the Yarbrough house. Here they did not register, wash, get supper or go through any other of the customary formulas of tired and dusty travelers ; but made a bee-line for the room of Col. Thomas Keogh, chairman of the radical state committee. The doors were closed, a few of the radical leaders were instantly assembled, and till a late hour last night, the cabalistic caucus went on.

"He gave out that his business was too urgent and important to admit of any interviewing."

Now, what is this urgent business, that requires all this haste and secresy ? We know the radical factionists are desperate. We know they are ruthless enough to find or make pretexts for throwing out, if possible, the vote of states like Florida, South Carolina ar Louisians, should such an outrage be necessary to "elect" Hayes and save themselves from the investigations and penitentiaries they deserve. But will they dare attempt any such pregramme in North Carolina with her grand majority of 20,000 for Tilden, Vance and Reform ? Do they dare even think of such a thing ? And, if Tilden is elected president of the United States by a fair and honest vote, will the people of the at free north stand tan him "counted out" by any device of the mad conspirators and plotters in power? Will they submit to have the popular will-the will of the majority-trampled upon, whether that majority comes from Florida or Massachusetts, Maine or South Carolina ?

The great exhibition at Philadelphia closes to-day, having completed the six months assigned to it by the commissioners. It closes in the very flush of success and while visitors are crowdiog to it in larger numbers than during any of the summer menths. Though it has not yielded profitable dividends upon the money invested by the country and the several states, yet it has come nearer to meeting expenses than any of the great world's fairs that have preceded it. It has paid, however, in nobler ways. It has signalized a glorious epoch in American history, by clearly designating the completion of our first hundred years. It has shown to the world-te the nations that looked upon us from abroad as a new and wild country, inhabited by a race of semibarbarians-what the young republic of the west has accomplished. The nations have found us not behind the greatest of them all in the useful arts; not behind them in wealth, in civilizaahead of them in the universal intelligence of the people. The war gave them an idea of our prowess, and they expected to find us a powerful nation, perhaps a warlike one, but they evidently looked for crudeness in the arts of peace. And yet in about everything of which we have undertaken the manufacture on a large scale, employing out own improved machinery for the purpose, we have surpassed them, and they gracefully acknowledge it. We do not speak of this in a spirit of boastful rivalry, but as furnishing the best evidence of our progress. The old world has been our teacher, but it is not unusual that a bright and ambitious pupil surpasses his master.

But it is in the civilizing and refining influence of the exhibition upon our ews people that it has done its greatest work Unexpectedly, almost, it has been a popular show, drawing people frem the humblest ranks of life, and people who had never been beyond the limits of their native countles before. These have seen our country and the world in miniature at least. They have met their fallew-citizens of every state: they have looked upon products, upon machinery, upon works of art of whose existence they had not even dreamed They go home with their minds full of new ideas and of a noble curiosity, which will bear fruit in further inquiry, in broader travel and study, and in cousequent increase of intelligence and culture. We shall have other world's fairs located in America is due time, as our turn arrives. The next will be at Paris in 1878, and it will attract thousands of these very Americans who have been drawn out of their seclusion for the first time by an irrepressible desire te see the centennial. Expenses to our great show have been high, and it will not be surprising if the American citizen from any of the Atlantic states finds the expense of a trip to Europe and a short sejourn in the French metrepolis even less than the cost of his visit to Philadelphia. These great dis plays afford a sort of world's holiday, to which the poor as well as the rich are learning the way. They contribute more to general knowledge than it is in the power of even the press to do, for it brings not only communities and states but nations face to face. The man who has been carefully through the Philadelphia exhibition, diligently studying its various departments and remembering what he observed, has become a cosmopelitan. The w ...!e world has been before him. He has seen the people and products of every land and clime, from Russia to India and Brazil. It is as though he had visited them all. And as these world's fairs multiply there will be a cheapening of expense, a gradual bringing them nearer to the homes and means of the poor. And through them we shall become not merely a united nationality, but a bomogeneous world at length, thus hastening the time when "the nations shall learn war no more."

idol-man of all the public men of the atatives of state filling the high and honorable po tion of governor of the state.

Governor Vance will, we learn, be in Raleigh on the eccasion of the grand selebration of our victory, and, we believe, it is in contemplation to have present all the state officers elect and the newly chosen democratic members of congress.

We congratulate our people on the splendid success of their political contest, a success well earned by hard work, now fully compensated, however, by the election of such men as Vance, Jarvis, Engelhard, Kenan, Worth, Love and Scarborough, who will illustrate, in the discharge of their duties, the highest type of official gentlemen, capable, honest and faithful public servants.

Our Triumph.

The democratic triumph in this state brings with it a long train of important benefits to all our people. It is not merely a victory giving to a party temperary ascendency in the state government. It means that the administration of our home affairs is committed to the hands of the real people of the state, men of intelligence, ability, character and substance, who will see to it that the best interests of the whole people are attended to; that coonomy, officiency and hencety will prevail in every branch of the state and county governments, ont of which condition of affairs will flow peace, good feeling and prosperity to all.

The constitutional amendments, having received the ratifying votes of a large majority of the people, our organic law will undergo some very important and wholesome changes. We shall no longer be hampered with a constitution unsuited in so many respects to the sparse population of the state and the condition of the people. Under the amended constitution heavy burdens of taxation will be lifted from the shoulders of the working people of the state. A good example of public sconomy will, besides lessening the expenditure of the public money, lead to private thrift.

Conn Deiay Floris Geur, India Kent Louis Mary Missi Misse New [Special dispatch to the Sentinel.] RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 9 .- A riot among the negroes eccurred here to-New night about 9 o'clock. Maddened by liquor and the supposed success of the Texas, republican party, about 500 collected on Main street armed with sticks and recks, and made threats of attacking the whites and did injure several with missiles. The whites made no demonstration and acted with great self-pos session. The police charged into the crowd of risters and dispersed them. The negroes formed again and proceeded to the upper portion of the city where they made other noisy demonstrations, breaking windows on the streets with rocks. No one was seriously injured. Everything is now quiet. All the prominent republicans here concede that Tilden is elected.

The Legislature.

Our General Assembly just chosen will convene, under the old constitution. on Monday, the 20th instant, little more than a week hence. It will be one of the most important sessions of the legislature for some years past. Aside from the legislation that will be necessary under the amended constitution, public interest will center in the election of a United States Senater.

General M. W. Ransom is the presen incumbent, and will be a candidate for re election. He will no doubt have opposition in the persons of some of our most distinguished public men, and the contest may assume a lively aspect. We do not know who the contestants will be, but we have heard the names of Judge Fowle and General Leach mentioned in connection with probable candidacy.

A temporary president of the senate, to preside until the inauguration of Lieutenant Governor Jarvis, on the 1st of January, is also to be chosen. In connection with this position, we have heard the name of Hon, James L. Robinson, of Macon, suggested.

There need be no apprehension on the part of any one that injurious, unwise or oppressive legislation will obtain or prevail under the amended constitution; the people have selected from a good class of men their representatives to the coming legislature, and we shall have only vise and beneficent provisions of law. It is a mistaken notion, grown out of before. In writing it we are writing the esptious opposition, that the new constitution confers too much power on the Carolina, who returns to administer the legislature, or that the coequality of the affairs of the state in the pleasant days judicial and legislative departments will of peace, instead of riding the storm of be affected, destroye 1, or their appropriate functions impaired under the new instrument.

It gives us more pleasure to write the name of this gentleman now than ever name of the chosen governor of North war, as in the days when he before occupied the position.

THE CITY YESTERDAY.

The excitement and interest in the news from the election continued all day yesterday and absorbed everything else. All dispatches, including the special and press dispatches to the Observer were taken to the room of the "News Club" and the news was announced to the eager crowd from the steps. In the afternoon Tilden and Vance's election was considered certain and all interest was sentered in South Carolina. Gov. Vance appeared on the streets just after dinner and his presence produced the wildest excitement. He was literally carried by the crowd of two or three hundred to

An attempt was recently made to rob Lincolo's grave. The men were caught removing the coffin but escaped. The times must indeed be hard when thieves go to digging in graves after valuables.
