The new French gun, weighing 37 tons, has thrown a projectile weighing 1,000 pounds, over eight miles. The English 43-ton gun has a maximum range nearly as great. The English 63-ton gun is credited with a theoretical range of over ten miles. It is true that these extreme ranges are attained with elevations which may not be secured in the turret ports of vessels, and this important point must not be ignored. But as our harbors have no guns approaching these in power, guns brought to attack them may be safely fired without any appliances of shelter to interfere with their extreme ranges. -Diagonal fronts upon both basques and street jackets are very popular, and English cutaway coats, fastening diagonally across the chest, with two buttons, are also considered very chic. MB. VOORHEES BATHER VABIES THE MONOTONY IN THE SENATE.

He Indulges in Some Very Plain and Truthful Talk on Edmunds' Resolutions.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 25 .- SEN-ATE .- In the Senate today Mr. Hoar reported from the library committee a bill establishing a commission, composed of the secretary of state, the librarian of Congress and the secretary of the Smithsonian institution, to examine and report to Congress as to the character and value of manuscripts belonging to Congress. Mr. Hoar explained that the work involved too great an expense to the government. He said Congress had the Franklin papers, the Rocham-beau papers and other manuscripts of great historical value; and the object of he proposed commission was that it might examine them and report as to whether they should be published and the best method of doing so. The chair laid before the Senate letter from the postmaster general, transmitting, in compliance with a recent Senate_resolution, a tabular statement of tourth-class postmasters removed since March 4, 1885. It was ireferred. The total number of such removals is 8,635. At the request of Mr. Edmunds the army bill was by unanimous consent made the unfinished business of the morning hour tomorrow, and Mr. Edmunds' resolutions were placed before the Senate.

Mr. Voorhees took the floor in opposition to the majority report. After stating the question at issue, Mr. Voorhees asked why the majority resolutions contented themselves with an attack on the agent (the attorney general) and shrank from a direct blow at the principal (the President?) Did the Senator from Vermont expect a cabinet officer to disobey the President. The resolutions were meant for popular effect. They contemplated no measure of legislation to remove any evil or pretended evil. They were merely the fulmination of a Senatorial opinion barren of result other than cheap partisan denunciation. There was a threat that if the papers

Mr. Evarts read from the report of the minority of the judiciary committee to show that the minority conceded that official pa-pers on file in the departments relating to a subject within the jurisdiction of the House of Representatives and the Senate were subject to the call of either house of Congress. On this admission he said it seemed to him there should be but little doubt as to the vote on the resolutions before the Senate. He said the arguments made by Democratic Senators would accord to the President the right to say whether the papers called for related to a subject with which Congress had a right to deal. He could under this contention refuse papers affecting his own conduct which it might be important for Congress to secure. This doctrine he argued was inadmissible. Mr. Call followed in opposition to the majority report. Mr. Evarts' speech. he said, had placed this subject upon a new and different ground. That was that we should measure the constitutional duties of the Senate by the propositions which the President might make in regard to a subject. Burnett was not to be confirmed because Duskin's removal had been placed upon improper grounds. Mr. Call thought that Mr. Evarts was not consistent in his statements as to the constitutionality of the tenure-of-office act, and read from the proceedings of the impeachment trial in support of his view. As to the papers that had been demanded, Mr. Call said they were open and accessible to every member of the Senate. Admitting that the departments were filled with documents bearing on the case; admitting even that these documents were filled with libelous charges, what function could they serve sought were withheld the nomination in the performance of the constitutional would not be confirmed. Sr. Louis, Mo., March 25.-Gov Marmaduke, of Missouri, issued at a late hour last night a proclamation relative to the railroad strike, so far as it affects the commerce of the State. After defining the respective duties of the railroad companies and their employees the proclamation continues:

"Wherefore, I, John S. Marmaduke. Governor of the State of Missouri, by virtue of the authority in me vested, do hereby call on the Missouri Pacific railway company and upon its officers and agents and its employees of every grade, each in their several capacities, to assist in resuming traffic of all kinds in the usual way on all the railroad lines operated by the said company in Missouri, and I warn all persons, whether they be employees or not, against interposing any obstacle whatever in the way of said resumption, and with a firm reliance upon the courage, good sense and abiding spirit of the public, I hereby call upon all good citizens to assist in carrying out the purpose of this proclamation. I also pledge the whole power of the State, so far as it may be lawfully wielded by its chief executive officer, to sustain the said company and its servants in the resumption and to restrain and punish all who may oppose it." SEDALIA, Mo., March 25.—Some men were arrested yesterday charged with wrecking a freight train Tuesday and njuring four men. The accused were admitted to bail. The law and order eague last night issued an address which demands that the strikers obey the law,

A Bright Youngster.

Children sometimes say very bright things; and sometimes they do not say the bright things attributed to them. The following is genuine and very neat: The nine-year old boy of a prominent member of the Raleigh bar was puzzling over a tough arithmetic lesson, with the point of his pencil in his mouth. His mother, observing what might become a bad habit, asked him if he was working his sums on his teeth. "No, ma'am, said the youngster, "but I wish I could, for I would have my lesson at my tongue's end." It wasn't bad; was it?

by President Cleveland, Mr. Voorhees said there were from 100,000 to 120,000 office-holders in the United States. For twenty-five years this tremendous patronage had been in the hands of one of the strongest, most zealous, vehement and proscriptive political parties ever known in the history of the world. It during that time a Democrat had office it was either by mistake or by arrangements not creditable to the persons concerned. Mr. Voorhees heartily endorsed Mr. Cleveland's action in making removals so far as action had been had and he would heartily endorse the President's action in the same direction if it went a thousand leagues further. Out of 3,600 persons employed in the interior depart-ment, Mr. Voorhees said only 400 changes had been made under the present administration, including the 'able and faithful secretary of the interior himself, and the principal positions next to him.
