WASHINGTON, June 17.—SENATE.— Mr. Ingalls offered a resolution requosting the President if, in his opinion, not incompatible with public interest, to furnish the Senate information as to the number of appointments and removal of clerks embraced within the provisions of the civil service act of January 16th, 1883; also of chief clerks and chiefs of divisions. On suggestion of Mr. Cockrell, who wanted to amend and enlarge the scope of the resolution, it went over one day. The Senate then proceeded to the consideration of bills on the calendar under the five minute limitation of debate. Among the measures passed was a bill to pay to the representative of the government of Great Britain $15,-550, to enable that government to indemify the owners of the bark "Chance" for abandoning their whaling voyage in the Arctic ocean in 1871 and recovering ninety American seamen from ships wrecked in the ice.

Mr. Frye explained that the action of this bark was most humane and creditable. Having heard that the American vessels were so placed as to involve the destruction of all hards if not speedily relieved, the bark promptly abandoned its own business for the season and went to the rescue of the Americans. Mr. Frye thought it a shame that this claim had for so many years

Mr. Frye said that Messrs. Morgan and Evarts, as well as himself, had intended to address the Senate with regard to this bill, but as the ression was advancing and the bill had received the unanimous support of the committee on foreign relations of the Senate, it was concluded that it would be as well to take up the bill and pass it without debate, if that weeding suit of plain broadcloth, and met the approval of the Senatu The bill was at once passed, without

The committee had endeavoyed to report a papfeetly fair bill, that should appropriate enough money to insure against a deficiency bill, but this was not a time to indulge in the creation of new establishments such as training schools. The country needed first new ships, new guns and a general increase in the naval establishment. He then proceeded to explain in detail the provisions of the bill and took occasion to impress upon the committee the necessity of thorough reorganization of the civil establishment of the navy. He criticised the expenditures previously madeby the bureau of construction and repairs and expressed the opinion that only enough money should be appropriated for the bureau as would enable the old navy to be kept in decent repair until Congress took the steps it should take to build a new navv. There was no appropriation in the bill for new cruisers or for the completion of the double-turreted monitors, both of those objects being provided for in a bill for the construction of a new navy. The appropriation for the monitors was left cut of the bill because the committee on naval affairs believed that the fact that some provision was made for the construction of the navy in this bill would be used as an argument when other measures should never be reached for consideration.

When Mr. Gladstone finally succeeded in reaching the station platform he found it packed with people, who welcomed him with enthusiastic cheers. At last he reached his seat in a special coach assigned for his conveyance. The window at his seat was open. When the crowd saw him at the window it setup another cheer, which was repreated several times. The people appeared desirous of having the premier address them with some parting words before going away on his arduous errand. He arose and spoke from the coach window. He thanked the people for the honor of their extraordinary demonstration. He adjured them to allow nothing to hide from them "the bare question of the hour." "An attempt has been made," the venerable orator exclaimed. "and will be made to direct your attention from the question at issue This question is solely whether Ireland shall be trusted to manage her own affairs. Those who deny Ireland this right admit that Canada and other British colonies enjoy such right. Are we to trust our fellow subjects in Ireland and govern by love, or are we to adopt the policy of the government's enemies and introduce into Ireland government by force." Mr. Gladstone then bade his friends good-bye and the train moved away. Enthusiastic and prolonged cheering accompanied its departure and hundreds of people, waving handkerchiefs and hats and God-speed ing the premier, ran along the platform
