NEWS OBSERVATIONS.

-The most singular and disappointing thing about the English elections thus far is the failure of the Irish vote to accomplish the results expected of it. It was claimed that at the preceding election the Tories gained at least eighteen seats by the aid of the votes cast for them at the direction of the Irish leaders. It was believed that these seats could at the present election be captured by the Gladstonites, but thus far the Tories have with apparent ease held the majority of them where elections have taken place. This fact is accounted for by the supposed abstention of English Liberals from voting. It certainly would be an astonishing thing if the Irish voters in England should display lukewarmness in the Liberal

-The appearance of Mrs. Gladstone in the present parliament will go down to history as one of its notable features. Her devotion to the cause of her husband will compare more than favorably with that of the beautiful Duchess who gave kisses for votes for Fox. There may be other instances where women in England have taken an active part from the rostrum in political contests, but if so we fail to recall them. Certainly the wife of a prime minister has never before done so. The wife of Disraeli was so wrapped up in the successful career of her lord and master as to ride some distance without complaint with her finger crushed in her carriage door ather than disturb his meditations on a speech he was about to make, but this scarcely comes in the same category with Mrs. Gladstone's services.

-The strangest story of the year comes from Bound Brook, New Jersey One of the citizens of the village was a man named Hebron. Three months ago his wife died, but before expiring she obtained a promise from her husband that he would not marry a second time. But in six weeks he took unto himself a buxom widow. Soon a change came over Hebron. He seemed ill at ease and appeared to be haunted by some terrible secret One night he arose from a troubled sleep to watch the burning of the Episcopal church in Bound Brook. Suddenly, watching the flames, he started back with an exclamation of horror, and, in spite of all his wife could do to arouse him, he appeared as though held by some strange fascination. Then he shrank back, placed his hands before his eyes as though to shut out some horrible vision, all the while trembling in every limb. He called upon his wife to see the spirit of his dead wife, which had come to haunt him, and remind him of the broken promise he made her on her death bed. He also declared that she brought an army of ghastly creatures to end his life-ten thousand devils, who jeered and jibed at him. He then fell to the floor in a dead faint. From that time Hebron believed he was a doemed man. His dresms were hideous, and his wakeful moments frightful. One morning he came to some of his friends with a countenance more ghastly than ever, and told them of a dream he had had during the night. He said he thought the skeleton of his first wife lay beside him, and when in terror he sprang from the bed, the specter followed him. At length it pinioned him to the wall with one of its long, ghastly fingers, and he felt his life blood ooze from his pierced heart and drip to the floor. Then, he said, the specter licked up his flowing blood, screaming: "So I stop the vitality of my false husband!' This story convinced Hebron's friends that he was insane, and they were taking steps to place him in the asylum when one morning of last week he was found dead in his bed. He died from

This article of comfort and convenience should always be neat and plain rather than gaudy and eccentric, and ought always, if possible, to harmonize with the dress with which it is worn, and seem in reality a simple, necessary part of the toilet, rather than an article of tion on the motion to postdisplay, like a banner or a flag. A parasol may well serve as an indication of the general good sense and cultivated taste of the wearer. It is always a conspicuous accessory, and originality here may with but little effort be al lowed to lapse into positive loudness and vulgarity. A plain silk serge parasol, devoid of garniture of any description, looks in far better taste carried with the very richest and most expensive toilet than one of white silk burdened with lace and flowers, worn en suite promiscuously with dresses of cambric, foulard, lawn and gowns of like kind, none of them in keeping

Cherokee Indians $75,000 --- The House Takes up the General Deficiency Bill.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 6 -SEN-ATE. -The Senate took up the bill to secure to the Cherokee freedmen and others their proportion of certain proceeds of land. Mr. Ingalls, from the committee on Indian affairs, reported a substitute for this bill. (It appropriates $75,000 for the purpose and directs how the amount shall be distributed.) The substitute was agreed to and the bill passed.

The Senate then proceeded to consider the amendments to the river and harbor bill.

The first amendment that was quesioned was the item appropriating $150,-000 for the purchase of Sturgeon bay and the Lake Michigan ship canal as a harbor of refuge.

Mr. Ingalls made the point of order that the paragraph was new legislation. This was not a bill to buy canals. It was general legislation not connected with the bill.

The chair over ruled the point of order, holding that as the amendment was reported by the committee (of commerce) and in pursuance of an estimate of the headof the war department it was in

Mr. Warner, of Missouri, inquired whether these additional records had not been accessible to the President.

Mr. Taulbee replied that the records were accessible to anybody who would take the trouble to go to the war department and search over the musty prison records of the Confederacy, but the President had acted on the written statement of the adjutant general that there was no such record found in his office, subsequent to the veto, the record was found, but the veto could not be withdrawn.

RALEIGH. N. C. WEDNESDAY MORNING, JULY 7, 1886.

The ways and means committee today ordered an adverse report to be made on Mr. Randall's tariff bill.

Mr. Kelly moved to strike out all but the administration features of the bill (the Hewitt provisions) but this motion was lost although Mr. Hewitt voted with the Republicans. Messrs. Reid and Hiscock-were absent.

A motion was then made to report the bill adversely, and upon the roll being called all of the Democrats voted in the affirmative, thus carrying the motion. The Republican members abstained from voting on the ground that the bill contained meritorious features along with objectionable provisions, which could not be disassociated.

Under motion Mr. Morrison will presept an adverse report on the bill, while the Republicans will not make a report. The committee also authorized Mr Breckenridge to report adversely ou Mr. Finley's resolution declaring it to be the sense of the House that the revenue tax on tobacco should be removed.

Dublin, July 6 .- A riot followed the first announcement of the result of the contest between Lewis and McCarthy, at Londonderry, today. The cause of the disturbance was the discovery, after the election had been announced in favor of Lewis, of a ballot box, the contents of which had not been counted. A recount followed, which almost made the majority of only three. The police interfered and attacked the loyalists who had assembled in front of the hotel where Lewis was staying and were making a demonstration in celebration of his victory. A large number of persons were injured. There was much excitement in the city over the affair.

Spirit of the State Press.

Mr Morrison moved last week an amendment to the rules of the House so as to permit the House to attach to every pension bill a clause specifically setting aside or levying a tax to meet the appropriation provided for. The principle is so just that it should be applied not only to pension bills, but to appro printions of all sorts. The fundamenta cause of the extravagance of Congress is that people fail to associate the idea of taxes with federal appropriations. by a vote of 1,824 against that of 1.795 If this very, hard fact were brought home to them, much demagogy which now is often profitable would be imposmionist opponents has been defeated in sible and many abuses would be rethe east division of Edinburg by Wal- formed. We of the south, it is true, some time have loved another flag and beneath its spotless field and starry union, in battle and blood shed, have defied the National emblem and authority and the years of '61 to '65 are yet a sad and tender memory; but none the less can we rejoice in a union made stronger by the temporary division; for a goverment that survives a struggle that would have been fatal to any other country on earth; and that re-unites its election a tie, giving it to Lewis by a people in a peace that scarce preserves a scar of war; and for a future that glows with the promise of continued prosperity and contentment.
