THURSDAY, JULY 8, 1886.

The glorious fourth was duly celebrated in Europe. The Americans in London were particularly full of patriotism.

MEMBERS of the House are simply inviting more vetoes in introducing in one day sixty-one so-called private relief bills. The President's stout gray goose quill is by no means yet worn out.

It is reported that Paul H. Hayne, the South's beloved poet, lies at death's door with little or no chance of recovery. The dying singer has brilliantly illustrated the genius of the South, but it may still be best to say, "Let him pass; he hates him who would keep him longer stretched upon the rack of this poor world."

One of the last batch of pension vetoes, that of James Carroll, was put on the ground that at the time the claimant received his wound he was engaged in plundering the neighborhood of Watauga, N. C., and was hunted down by the home guards. There could hardly have been better ground for the action.

Another batch of vetoes of fraudulent pension bills! If the country is not congratulating itself on having a man in the White House who knows right from wrong and is absolutely immovable in maintaining the former, it ought to be. There has been nothing quite so fine as our democratic executive's puncturing of this pension fraud in many years.

JUDGES BRAGAN, it is said, will make every effort to get his inter-State commerce bill through before the end of the session, but the prospects of success are not fair. The main difficulty in the way of the measure is the fact of the widely different views of the House and Senate as to the methods of regulation. These can hardly be reconciled and the result will probably be that the bill will fail as it did two years ago.

The contest for the democratic gubernatorial nomination in Georgia is now practically decided. The primaries so far have chosen 148 Gordon delegates, 68 Bacon delegates and 8 delegates unattached. The convention will be composed of 351 delegates, 176 being necessary to nominate. Gordon is thus within 28 of a majority and this deficiency will probably be made up this week. The contest has been a bitter one and very much to be deplored from a party point of view.

MR. GLADSTONE seems about to fail in his great campaign in behalf of home rule for Ireland. He has the full sympathy of the masses apparently, but it is clear that these do not yet control affairs. They will do so eventually, without doubt, but it is probable now that their great leader will not live to see that consummation of his hopes. He has made a magnificent record, however—one that the whole world has applauded, and he may have the satisfaction of knowing that those who come after him will reap the benefit of his labors even though those labors are not now crowned with success.

HARLEM, New York, had the biggest pyrotechnical display on the 5th, which was the 4th, in the country. A drunken man dropped a lighted cigar in a box of fire-crackers in a fire-works store and such a popping, in consequence, such a hissing of rockets through the air, such a bursting of bombs, such a scattering of blazing pinwheels, mines and colored fire in every direction had never before been seen in Harlem. The cost of the fun was $400,000 or more, the fire started by the cigar having destroyed not only the building in which it originated, but several others in its neighborhood. Luckily no lives were lost and the drunkard who applied the spark got off without a singe.

The dairymen's organization of the North is doing its utmost to secure the passage of the oleomargarine bill by the Senate. It is thus bringing every influence to bear on the Southern members from whom the strongest opposition to the measure came. But its efforts will probably be in vain. The opposition of the Southern Senators is on constitutional grounds and they hold that the bill is an attempted perversion of the taxing power of the government, in that it taxes one industry for the benefit of another. Another objection to the bill is that it brings into disrepute cotton seed oil, which is a subject of industry in the South and a growing one. The people as a whole have no objection to the manufacture of oleomargarine since that article is not necessarily unwholesome. What they do object to is the sale of oleomargarine as butter. They have no desire to tax any legitimate industry out of existence.

Quite a serious obarge has been made in the statement that four members of the New York delegation who were not in the House when the vote was taken on the appropriation for the Bartholdi statue were recorded as voting in the affirmative when they were not present. It appears however that there is nothing in the charge. On examination being made the tally-sheet showed that all the members responded and all voted as they should.

were marked on the first call of the bell real it would of course have been most reprehensible. It has been quite common in former years for the clerks to yield to the solicitation of members who were absent and record their votes on questions in which their constituents were interested, but in 'his democratic year of grace such an act would be very serious not only to the clerk but to the members involved. It is astonishing how a prevalence of true democratic ideas clarifies the political atmosphere and places all the round-about and tricky ways of some public men in their true light of dishonesty.

Ordinary Federal legislative bills, after they pass Congress, are taken to the White House, where the President has his own time to consider, approve or veto them; but on the last day of the session when bills are rushed through by the hundred in the excitement and under the pressure of the closing hours, it has been the custom for the President to go to the President's room in the capital and to sign bills as fast as they could be brought to him without having time to examine them or even to know what they provided for. Sometimes indeed to give him time simply to affix his signature to all the bills, the hands of the clock have been set back, in order that, technically, the measures might be approved before the minute fixed for final adjournment should be indicated to the members of the two houses. Under these circumstances, it appears, the signing of bills has been a mere farce, and under such circumstances has it been that jobs and schemes have often been gotten through. Our democratic President proposes to change it all. He declares that he will have nothing to do with bills that do not come to him in time for due investigation, and the people will applaud his determination. There will be no more jobs squeezed through in the hurry of adjournment while he remains in the executive chair. He will have time to consider bills or he will allow them to fail. This may prolong the session a few days beyond the time when all the appropriations bills shall have gone through Congress, but the country can afford this in view of the great benefits to be derived from the last reform instituted by the President. In Mr. Cleveland's action here too the people will discover fresh evidence of his devotion to public interests and the advantage to be had from a democratic view of things from the executive chair.

The South is again moving on Pennsylvania, but this time not in the character of an army with banners, but as a competitor in the market for pig iron. For some time the advance has been observed from this side the line but it has been pooh-poohed by the Northern furnace men. It has now reached the very citadel of the iron-masters and there is alarm in consequence. The Penny Press of Pittsburgh says: "Southern furnace men have at last scored a point in Pittsburgh. Several large iron mills are now being more or less pig iron made in Birmingham, Ala., and in Tennessee. This iron is selling, delivered in this city, at from $15 to $15.50 per ton—fifty cents less than the price of home iron. Furnacemen here are naturally somewhat alarmed. They do not know what will be the result. They have been fighting the introduction of Southern iron here for a couple of years, and many manufacturers were led to believe that it was of an inferior quality; so much so that the reduced price at which it was offered would be no inducement to use it. This has not proved strictly true. It has not been used to any great extent so far, but it has given satisfaction, and some very large sales have been made within the past month." Referring to this article the Philadelphia Record says: "To add to the misery of this Southern invasion, ore has advanced, coke has advanced and freight rates have advanced, and the price of pig iron cannot be advanced unless Alabama is shut out of the Pittsburgh market." Alabama has led in this powerful invasion, but it is followed closely by other Southern States, among them North Carolina, whose pig has steadily been shipped now for years to Philadelphia and has there competed successfully with all other iron. The Cranberry iron indeed is of a very superior quality, being excelled in no respect by the iron of any region in the world. Such a product is bound to be sought after and the rapid rise of the South in the estimation of iron manufacturers is only another feature of its general rise in industrial importance.

The various township meetings Saturday were generally harmonious. Local questions will make the contest lively this year, but the Democracy are solid and Buncombe will hold her place in the line. Six days of July—six days of rain. How long, O Lord, how long is the cry of the people. But one clear day in all the month of June, usually so bright and fair and sunny. So far, not a single clear day has marked the month of July, and the regular rainy season of August is before us. The prospect is gloomy in the extreme. Not more than half a crop will be made in the transmontane section.

The U. S. Senate is on trial before the country as the aristocratic feature of the government and the judgment of the country inclines to make it more in conformity with the genius of our institutions, and in pursuance of that sentiment to divest it of its secret and exclusive character. In the very nature and propriety of things there are some questions of foreign policy that should be discussed with closed doors but there can be no good reason why questions relating to our domestic policy and personal fitness for public employment should be considered in secret—Elizabeth City Economist.

At the last meeting an intelligent purpose was manifested to restore the State press association to something of its former usefulness; and we think with good results. The meeting at Morehead was business-like and expressed broad and liberal views. The adjournment over to Washington City while widening the field of pleasures, also brought with it increased responsibilities. For they visited the National capital, not as a group of pleasure seeking editors, but the presumed exponents of North Carolina thought and influence. They have therefore committed themselves in the future to speak and to act for the whole of the State and not solely for its parts and sections.

They would stand in false position if hereafter they narrowed their interests and efforts down to the restricted limits in which it has been too much their habit to labor. They are compelled to remember that while there is a seaboard interest to be advocated, there is also a great mountain interest that commands growing attention; and that while there is also the great central section, broader, larger and more important perhaps than either, but all combined making the great commonwealth we call North Carolina, but most unwisely or inconsiderately treated by the press as three several, distinct provinces, unconnected by mutuality of destiny, and only loosely attached by the ties of State policy.—Asheville Citizen.

The Sixty-Six Year Old Tramp. Charlotte Observer. Andrews, the veteran pedestrian, is again on a tramp from Atlanta to Boston, and arrived in Mecklenburg county Friday. He is ninety-six years old and this is his second trip afoot to Boston. He is accompanied by the same little dog that was with him last year, and he is evidently as strong and hearty as ever. Mr. Andrews spent Friday night in a farm house in Sharon township, and astonished the hospitable household by the tales of his travels and adventures. His narratives were generally believed but when he vowed that he had seen all the Presidents except Garfield, from Washington to Cleveland, the faith of his host was rather shaken, and Andrews was thenceforth regarded with suspicion. Doubtless he is credited with a good many honors which he never earned.

—Anthony, Harper county, Kan., gives the prohibition movement a setback. There is nothing the prohibitionists have more warmly advocated as a beverage than lemonade. Nevertheless sixty persons, one of whom will probably die, were poisoned by lemonade on the 4th at a celebration at Anthony. The noxious stuff was made of tartar emetic. What in the world can we safely drink?

The Debility Produced by Malaria and the disease itself are effectually remedied by the Liebig's Cocoa Biscuits. Beware of imitations. "My patients derive marked and decided benefit from it," says Professor J. M. CARROLL, M. D., L. D., Surgeon-in-Chief, U. S. Army, etc., etc. Invaluable in dyspepsia, biliousness, sleeplessness.

The weather is settled, and tobacco can be put in a order, not only will former prices be resumed, but the probabilities are that there will be an advance. Through the influence of our very worthy, popular and enterprising citizen, Mr. Arrington, the "Western Union" telegraphic company constructed a line to our place, established an office and now Warrenton is in direct communication with the larger cities of the United States by wire. Thus we are moving on step by step, and ere long we hope to stand side by side in growth, enterprise and popularity with Durham, Winston, Reidsville, Henderson and other towns. ANY LESS.

Asheville Items. Special Cor. of the News and Observer. ASHEVILLE, July 6, 1886. The normal school opens today at the Methodist college, same place it was held last year. The faculty are Prof. E. A. Alderman, Goldsboro, principal; Prof. Benjamin E. Atkins, Asheville; Miss Olivia Millard, Goldsboro; Miss Maggie McDowell, Weaverville; Prof. George D. Meares, Winston, and Mr. John W. Starnes, Asheville, the secretary.

Prof. W. B. Royall, of Wake Forest, and his wife, are here, the guests of Charles E. Lee, Esq., one of our most highly esteemed citizens. Yesterday the county commissioners granted license to the losses of Battery Park hotel to retail spirituous liquors. The "glorious fourth" was not altogether unnoticed. The banks closed, the cornet band turned out in full uniform and enlivened the town with music. The patriotism of the colored population found a vent in a festival or two, and some dancing.

The water works are now fairly under way. The board of aldermen have awarded the contract for furnishing pipe (water-mains) to the Chattanooga Pipe Foundry company at $32.50 per ton. The contract for steel water-tank was awarded to Alfred Webb & Co., of Chattanooga, for $9,965; the tank to be forty-five feet in diameter and sixty-two feet in height, with a capacity of 720,000 gallons. A large and destructive water-spout burst on north Turkey creek last Saturday.
