The bereaved widower sat in the first carriage alone, and behind came the twenty mourners, all men, throwing from their carriages bits of rice paper, which are supposed to occupy the attention of the Chinese devil so that the soul of the dead may be undisturbed. A bon-fire was made of the household effects at the grave. -From this time until April, says the Rural Messenger, keep the pig pens, cattle pens and sheds, and stables and barnyards well litterd with pine straw, or forest leaves of any kind that are most convenient and abundant. We prefer pine straw because it is somewhat easier to handle with the fork, and makes a nice bed, but no better manure than leaves. The tramping of the stock will out the litter up fine, and becoming mixed with the droppings, the farmer will have, by spring many loads of rich manure. If farmers would only pen all their stock at night, and every night, and keep all the stalls well littered, they would make much more manure than they do, and such as would improve their land and render the use of commercial fertilizers both profitable and desirable. At favorable times during the autuma, get out from the swamps, or along marsh and river sides, the muck and other decayed matter, take it at once to the fields and spread it on the surface quite thick. After this is spread apply on top of it 10 bar-res-25 bushels—of either shell or rock lime, or more of agricultural lime: or in place of the lime, 50 to 100 bushels of marl per seres. Some little experience with the same swamp muck leads us to value it very highly.
