THURSDAY, OCT. 27, 1887.

The Princess Beatrice is again a mother. It is a girl.

The train we have had has been snowed at the north and as far south as Staunton, Va. We have been lucky, after all.

A conspiracy has been revealed by the sudden death of an American in London. Full disclosures are expected to follow the inquest.

The first paper in the country to espouse the land theories of Henry George is reported in the hands of a receiver. The fact is ominous of the fate of Mr. George's cause.

The friends of Mr. Garrett deny strenuously that he is insane but there is certainly something the matter with his mental faculties. On the subject of the B. & O. telegraph deal he is daff beyond question.

The American Shipping and Industrial League has just closed a very enthusiastic session at Boston. Its next convention will be held at Birmingham, Ala., and Hon. A. M. Waddell of this State is down for an address on the occasion.

Edouard Reményi, the distinguished violinist, who has fiddled to the delight of Raleigh people, has been dropped in a shipwreck off Madagascar. He was a Hungarian by birth and at the time of his death was about 50 years of age. He made his first appearance in America in New York in November, 1878. Personally he is said to have been the simplest and quietest of men.

Gov. Gorman of Georgia testifies that prohibition under the local option rule has proven a success in his State. He says Atlanta's business has not been injured by no license and that the same can be said of the towns in the 100 counties out of a total of 137 in the State where prohibition prevails. The negroes, he says further, have been benefited in a marked degree by the change.

DELANEY NICOLL, District Attorney Marjane's able assistant in the prosecution of New York's bootleggers, is to be nominated for district attorney by the Republicans. Tammany hall and the county democracy have nominated Jno. R. Fellows, it will be remembered. Whether Mr. Nicoll will accept or not is as yet undetermined. He has hitherto been a democrat. A friend of his is quoted as saying:

"He has done nothing whatever to secure a nomination—in fact, does not want it—but, if it is shown by a public demonstration of citizens generally that the public desires him to run as a candidate, he will undoubtedly consent to the use of his name."

There has been a very considerable independent movement in his behalf. These Chinese concessions seem really to have been made after all, but they go to Wharton Barker of Philadelphia and not Count Mikiewicz. The Count indeed, seems to have played the part, not even of second fiddle in the matter. He has been not more than third or fourth fiddle, at best. The concessions cover, as will be remembered, a telephone system in the treaty ports of the empire, and a national bank. This bank will furnish money for the building of specified railroads and at the same time make bids for the contract. Both Chinese and Americans will subscribe capital to the bank, and the immediate railroad projected will run from Peking via Shanghai to Canton, a distance, including a detour through the Yang Tze Kiang valley, of 3,000 miles.

The undertaking thus appears a pretty large one even for Yankee enterprise. The condition of affairs in Europe presents a serious aspect. In Germany they have a protective tariff, but that does not keep up prices for labor, and the workmen are retreating on Sundays just as on other days. This is especially so in Saxony, where a few years ago every grown person, it was said, could read and write, education being compulsory and general, and to a less extent it is so in other parts of the Empire. The wages are very low—not so low as in Belgium, which is the most densely populated country in the world and a workshop throughout, but lower than in England. The result is that the protected Germans are not underselling the British in the open foreign market and the future of the English manufacturers looks relatively gloomy. In England, although the winter has not set in, the crowds of unemployed men are greater than usual and more demonstrative. England would long ago have been brought face to face with the grand problem of a disorganized population had it not been for her surplus colonial policy, provided for her surplus boys and girls in Canada, Australia, India, Southern Africa and her island dependencies. Germany must now do likewise, and we may reasonably expect that in a few years there will be a vast hordes from Europe to Africa, subduing the Dark Continent and preparing it for the abode of a new civilization. The pressing European problem of the future will be to allow room and Africa will be the place to find it.

STATE IMPROVEMENT.

If North Carolina is ever to be anything more than a strip of land between two States, her people will have to make her so. Nature has done but little for us, and we cannot reasonably look to outsiders to build us up. In saying that nature has done but little for us we must be understood as speaking with reference to this subject. Nature indeed has done much for us. She has bestowed upon us fertile fields, splendid forests, no-bler rivers, unsurpassed water-power and a salubrious climate. But she has not been lavish in her commercial gifts. Our harbors are few and not well placed. From the beginning the natural outlet for the staple sections was New York, and now by rail road lines the central section is made tributary to the same point, while farther west the iron, highway leads to City Point and Richmond. And trade speaks upward, thus the highways and the course of trade draw away from, not to, our own seaports. But some man will say, Well, what do we care for our seaports, so long as we get cheap freight to the Atlantic coast? That appears to be the logic, but on examination it will prove to be a contracted view of the matter. If the general course of human experience from the earliest ages is worth anything, we can learn from it that it is of the first importance to build up our own cities; that it is of the first importance to build up our own trade; that business considerations unite with patriotic impulses and State pride in demanding that commercial centers should be fostered at home. Whenever one thinks of Massachusetts, it is Boston. Whenever one thinks of the State of New York, it is the City of New York. Whenever one thinks of Virginia, it is Norfolk or Richmond; of North Carolina—how is it? The naval stores men in distant countries know Wilmington; the tobacco smokers have seen on the pyramids the legend "Smoke. Blackwell & Co's Durham Tobacco with the sign of the Bull"—sign sacred in the eyes of the Egyptian fellahs, that primitive race that tills the over-flooded districts of the Nile, stretching away in the distance. But what have we of magnitude to engage the attention of the stranger; of commercial power to awake the wonder of industrial development to elicit his praise? Indeed, what have we in harmony with the activities of the age in which we live that appeals to our own pride and makes us feel that North Carolina is a great, strong commonwealth among her sisters? It is because of our love for North Carolina that this subject moves us; it is because of our patriotism that we unite; it is because we are loyal to her fame and zealous in doing her good that we try to state this matter plainly—without coloring.

Let us first understand our deficiencies and then we can better overcome them. We want cities in North Carolina; commercial centers; trade centers and manufacturing centres in the interior—commercial entrepôts on the seacoast. Wilmington and New Bern must be fostered, and the highest intelligence of the State should be directed to that end. The work of making Raleigh and other interior towns distributing points and centres of trade should never flag. The policy of building up the manufacturing interests of Durham, Fayetteville, Henderson and other similar towns, where natural development has already made such satisfactory progress, should be the constant solicitude of those directing the affairs of State. What now are the affairs of State but this very class of subjects whose superior importance we are pressing on public attention? No longer does the subject of liberty or the right of personal security engage our attention. They are established. It is the material prosperity, the business activities of the people that demand our ardent endeavors. Let the public men of North Carolina awaken to a full realization of their duty in this matter, and bring to bear their best thoughts, for the accomplishment of the objects desired.

THE LEASING MOVEMENT.

Today the corner-stone of the proposed monument to Gen. Lee at Richmond will be laid with appropriate ceremonies. North Carolinians may not be able to join largely in person with their Virginia brethren in the ceremony, but they will do so in spirit almost to a man. The memory of the great leader of Southern, the true patriot, the spotless gentleman is revered as deeply in this State as anywhere on earth. North Carolinians served under the pride of Southern arms—North Carolina troops were his mainstay. None better than North Carolinians, therefore, know what he was—know the real grandeur of his character.

The fact has been recognized by the according to our State the place of the highest honor in the order of the exercises of the day and to our brethren across the line we would say that this recognition is appreciated.

From Cherokee to Carrick we sympathize in the effort to preserve the recollection of the illustrious virtues of Lee for the guidance of future generations.

May the elements be propitious at Richmond today and may the gathering to do honor to the occasion be made up of many tens of thousands.

BALTIMORE'S ELECTION FOR MAYOR.

Baltimore's election for mayor came off yesterday, with the result elsewhere reported. The contest has been one of the liveliest character, full of personalities and all manner of bitterness.

SUPREME COURT DECISIONS.

Regents, et al., vs. Clements. Where there are two co-obligors on a single bond on which the presumption of payment has arisen, the presumption cannot be rebutted so as to charge one of the obligors by the naked admission of the other that the bond had not been paid, made in the absence of the obligor sought to be charged. Such admissions with regard to single bonds are held to be within the scope of section 22, chapter 65, Revised Code, as such bonds are declared to be, along with promissory notes, on a footing with inland bills of exchange, and are treated as mere promissory notes under seal.

The Escape of a Horse Thief.

For two years or more Mitch Nelson, of this county, has been evading the officers of the law, who want him for horse-stealing. Some weeks previously to the opening of the last term of our Superior court, he was captured by Deputy Sheriff Israel, as fully reported in the Times, and lodged in jail. His brother, Eliaha, procured his release by becoming his surety for his appearance at the court, but when the case was called on, it was discovered that Mitch had flown. A capias was issued and, in addition, Eliaha offered a reward of $10 for his capture. A few days since Sheriff Israel having heard that Mitch was living at Waynesville, he wrote to the authorities there who arrested him, placed him in jail, and notified Sheriff Israel, who, on Monday, went after him and brought him back as far as the Asheville depot, where he was chained him to the iron arm of a sent in the waiting-room, left him in charge of a man deputed to guard him, and went up to the city to transact some business. Before he returned the prisoner made his escape. The twelve-year-old daughter of Mitch was accompanying him, and taking advantage of the carelessness of the guard, one or both of them had broken the arm entirely off the seat, which dangled from his arm as he ran, followed by his daughter.

It is useless to attempt the cure of a ailment if the habit is allowed to remain unbroken. Neuralgia and rheumatism are traceable to a disordered condition of the blood, and in numerous cases have been cured by taking a few bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

The eldest daughter of General Boulanger is about to enter Carmelite convent. New York Millinery Bazaar. No. 211 Fayetteville street, has the grandest display of fashionable millinery in this city. A. J. Mich, an experienced milliner has charge of the trimming department.

Considering the price of fashionable bonnets, an exchange concludes that the word "millionaire" is but a corruption of milliner.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once, it produces natural quiet sleep by relieving the pain of a tooth, and the little cherub awakes as bright as a button. It is very pleasant to taste, soothes the inflamed gum, always allays all pain, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Beware of cheap imitations.

It is Absurd
