Alamance Court Echoes. To see all the phases of the Tarheel you have to attend court. A crowd on one of these occasions is composed of farmers, lawyers, doctors, newspaper men, tombstone men, insurance men, patent-medicine men, organ grinders, tobacco drummers, men with lung-testers, men with patent machines, cake sellers, hat sellers, out-of-door restauranters, a sprinkling of gamblers, and a few stray capitalists, but the busiest individual of the lot is the proverbial horse swapper, who "gets there all the same." All the above classes were represented at Alamance court last week. Notwithstanding the very disagreeable weather, the crowd on Tuesday was large. One of the most amusing incidents of the week was a speech by Mr. C. W. Barham, of Durham, the popular auctioneer of the Parrish Warehouse. He was there in the interest of his warehouse, of course, and his enthusiasm getting the better of him, he mounted an empty goods-box and began to orate in the most earnest and eloquent manner about the advantages of Durham as a tobacco market, and the Parrish Warehouse in particular. About this time the court-house winof that body united in a petition to dow was suddenly raised and the sheriff's voice called out to the orator General. In that petition they say, The gallant captain was not to be outdone thusly, but yelling "Come on, boys!" he charged a patent medicine man's wagon on another part of vacate in double-quick time. Taking possession of the wagon, Capt. Barham made one of the most soul-stirring speeches it has ever been the writer's good fortune to listen to.
