But the people of this country will pass judgment upon the Republican party, not upon the Republican candidates. Were that party any longer worthy of confidence, had it not departed widely and hopelessly from the guidance and the principles with which it won its early triumphs, were it actuated by an honest purpose to make the people of the United States more prosperous and happy than its were its professions more sincere, its policies wiser and its leaders purer. the New York Times might not find it a distasteful task to support the candidates, commonplace as they are, who were put in nomination vesterday. But we have no faith in the party or in its leadership or tendencies, and we have only abhorrence for the monstrous policy of confiscating the gains of labor and the profits of trade by extortionate protective taxes which has become its only vitalizing principle. The maintenance of needless taxes for protection's sake is not and never was a principle of true Republicanism. It is the principle that has created and sustained a greedy horde of manufacturers who have shaped it to their uses. There is some question as to the identity of the "white Pasha," whose arrival in the Bah El Gazel province of the Soudan is reported from the Stanley, who must by this time have reached Emin Bey's headquarters at trifling, and may be overthrown by a slight effort. It would be an attractive feat to such a man as Stanley to link his name with Gordon's by the recapture of Khartoum. Short of that. it is possible for him to do a great deal to strengthen the position of Emin Bey, who has announed his purpose not to be rescued, but to remain where he is with the people to whom he has become attached. Stanley has with him about 500 men, many of whom are armed. He could not do better thau to turn this force to account by employing it to vanquish any troublesome neighbors Emin Bey may have. Rundle Bey, who telegraphs from Suakim a confirmation of the reported arrival of a "white Pasha" in the interior Soudan, adds the information that the Mahdi's successor is sending a force to oppose him. The event will be awaited with interest.
