By Telegraph to the News and Observer. New York, Nov. 26 .- The first storm of the winter is about ever in this immediate vicinity, but is still raging with unabated violence along the New England coast. Telegraphic communication with that section i entirely suspended. The Western Union Company has no wires be ween this city and Philadelphia, thus shutting off all southern points. The Associated Press Washington circuit which usually runs from this city to Philadelphia. Baltimore and Washington direct, is this morning made up by way of Buffalo and Pittsburg. The storm along the coast all the way from Hatteras has been very violent and it is said that many marine disasters have occurred, although it will be some days before reports will begin to come in, as the storm would drive vessels off shore. The wires to Sandy Hock are all down. but the last message received from that place stated that the highest winds ever experienced by the observer there was raging.

A SNOW STORM. WASHINGTON, NOV 26 .- A Show storm set in here early this morning and the high wind prevailing at the same time made it very uncomfortable for people compelled to be out of to rain. The signal officer says the storm will elear up this evening. Reports received at the signal office show that the area of the snowfall has extended along the Atlantic coast from New England as far south as Norfolk. Telegraphic communication was seriously interrupted all day and tonight there is no direct northvia western cities and Buffalo.

CONGRESS.

THE LAST WEEK OF THE VACATION. By Telegraph to the News and Observer.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 26 .- The last week of the vacation of the Fiftieth Congress opens with less than fifty of the 325 members of the House in the city, and from present indications a full House may not be secured until after the holidays. Barely a dozen Senators are here, and the prospects on that side of the capitol are about the same as in the lower branch. Speaker Carlisle is expected to arrive tomorrow to prepare for the opening of the session. There is considerable work for him to do in this line. The mail of members is unusually heavy. especially that of republicans. On them now falls the burden of the ofnal (newspaper) in this city, have fice seeking correspondence borne for been destroyed by fire. Loss 10,000 the last four years by their democratic colleagues. More than onehalf the letters received are petitions for places. As to the composition of the House in the Fiftyfirst Congress, there is nothing new in the situation. The democratic officials expect that the republicans will organize it, although the majority will be very small. Gen. Clark, clerk of the present House, loday reserved the certificates of Catchings, of Missouri, and Wheeler, of Alabams, the first on the list except Hermaun's, of Oregon, where the certificate came in last August. Sidney E. Mudd, republican, who was defeated by Barnes Compton in the fifth Maryland district, will contest the latter's right to his seat, alleging that he has been counted out; that he can show this by the returns filed at Annapolis.

There is some talk of an extra session being called by President Harrison. It is desired by the representatives of territories awaiting admission. Gifford, of Dakota, stopped at Indianapolis on his way to Washington and had a conference with Presidentelect Harrison on the subject. He was informed that the call of an axtra | T. W. SCHOONER GOES DOWN AND OF ITS CREW OF SIXTEEN MEN FIFTEEN

By Telegraph to the News and Observer. SCITUATE, Mass., Nov. 26 .- A terrible loss of life is reported here by wreck this morning. The large fishing schooner Edward Norton, of and from Boston, went ashore off First Cliff Point at 6.30 last night and immediately went to pieces. Her crew consisted of sixteen men and fifteen of them have perished. One man, Allen by name, clung to the vessel and when the tide left her this morning he succeeded in reaching shore, The vessel was discovered by the midnight patrol of the Life Saying Station, but too late to render assistance, She lies bottom up and is a complete wreck. She is owned by Stribbs & Co., of Boston.

The American Game of Foot-Ball. It may help the public in the ap-preciation of the coming foot-ball game between the Chapel Hill and Trinity College elevens to know something about the history and the preliminaries of foot-boll.

The ordinary "rough and tumble" game of foot ball is destined to be no more than the game of school boys. The regular college game known in America as the association game is. however, a most scientific species of athletics and may well be ranked first among those sports in which the qualities of the soldier are capable of being developed. The old game is a game in which. brute force and shin-kicking play a prominent part. The new game of foot ball, better known as the Rugby game, was first introduced from England into Harvard College sometime before 1875. Since then nearly every college of any considerable size in the New England and the Middle States has learned the art, and every week during October and November the accounts of the inter-collegiate of the athletic news of the day. Rugby game, sent a challenge to Yale the goal-keeper, who has the last College to play a match game at New chance to prevent the runner from Haven. The result was that Yale in getting behind the goal and scoring a her greennes was thrashed all over touch down for his side. But the the ground, though she played with that usual doggedness and desperation for which her teams are still noted. But that was the last vicory her crimson rival ever gained of the to his rescue. Then the struggle beblues Yale took to unremitting practice and next year and every year afterwards defeated Harvard at her

There were then 15 players on each side in the game. In 1876 Princeton adopted the Rugby rules. By this time Yale had developed some very fleet runners among her players and saw that if the size of the teams could be reduced her chances might be greatly strengthened. Accordingly in 1878 when the Foot ball Association was organized, with Harvard, Yale and Princeton as members, Yale urged that 11 players be made to constitute a full team instead of 15. She demonscrated that the scientific development of the game depended on a smaller number.

Later practice has proved that Yale was not wrong; for a comparison of circles round squarely behind the the original Rugby as now played in England, with the American Association game, as played in American colleges today, shows, as many competent judges assent, that the American Association game is a marked improvemen', both scientifically and in practice, upon the English Rugby from which it sprang.

No one is capable of judging of this game until he has played in it. As a from the goal line. A player balances spectator he may consider it danger- the ball on the tips of his fingers and ous to the players. But it is dangerous only to the timid or the reckless, while to the one who plays either with a cool desperation or a furious energy there is no danger—except to such as are unpracticed in meeting such players. As a rule the players can make the game a dangerous one ready for another kick off. or a safe one. Three years ago it was regarded as necessarily dangerous, but since then the feeling between the leading teams has improved and the temper of the game become milder and entirely within the limits of good manners and fair play. The public must further remember as far as he can, until he is being that foot ball players usually give a couple of months of daily practice for the public contests into which they inter. This disciplines them to long runs, enlarges their breathing capacity, toughens their muscles and enables them to stand rough tackling it rises." But this is a quite difficult without discomfiture. Most or quite all of the pity bestowed by the spectators upon a roughly handled player is not only wasted but would be resented by the player himself as a reflection upon his endurance. On the other hand, nothing works like applause upon the players. Every exhibition of pluck, whether foiled or not, should be acknowledged promptly by the lookers on.

In the above diagram space enclosed by the four lines is the field of play. The goal posts GG,GG, at the ends, are 20 feet or more high, 181 feet apart and are connected by a cross bar ten feet feet from the ground. To kick the ball over this cross-bar from some point in the field of play is the feat that decides the game. TT,TT are the touch lines; the end lines are the goal-lines. RRRRRR indicate the rushers lined up on both sides facing the ball (B) lying ready for a kick off, in the center of the field, by that side to whose lot it has fallen to start the game. Q is the quarter-back whose chief business it is to pass the ball back to H, H the half backs who are then expected to dash towards their opponents' goal. But some opponent tackles him and holds him; then he suddenly tosses the ball to some one on his side who darts in a circuit, around his opponents, toward goal; first he dodges one, then slips of the athletic news of the day.

They all huddle together, swaying, pushing, squeezing, trying, until the man that has the ball yells, "Down!" The first scrimmage is over. At once they all give up and range themselves in confronting lines on the spot; the middle rusher places the ball under his foot, his quarter-back stands ready to hurl it to the half-back, who is just chafing to get it and try for the surreme honor of a touch-down. He's got it and away he goes, nobody near him out on the further side of the field. His opponents left their flank ungarded, and he sees it and sweeps through and goal with a host following but too far off to snatch victory from his hands now. The field of spectators, whose side has won, is beside itself with joy; hats are in the air, banners wave and shout after shout re-echoes for the gallant boys. This touchdown entitles the winners to a trial for goal. They bring the ball back into the field again, twenty-five yards another specially trained for it, taking an estimate of the force of the wind, gives the ball a kick which sends it soaring gaily between the goal-posts. It is impossible to give all the rules here. The most important is that of passing the ball back, never forward towards an oppc. nent's goal. Otherwise it is called a "foul." Other rules are better learned from this one and by watching the game with a diagram of the grounds and the arrangement of players in hand. The side that touches the ball down back of its own goal, whither its opponents have forced it, makes what is called a "safety-touch-down", which counts in favor of the other side. But the ball is then brought out not more than 25 yards, by holders of it in safety, and kicked out again by them:
