Does Not This Beat Fiction? New York Herald.

Imagine two young people, both healthy and handsome, passionately in love with each other. They lived at Linz, some twenty miles from Coblenz, and there they were married. Young Scheffer thought of pothing but his beautiful girl wife, and sheshe adored him. This beatific state of affairs lasted for three years. Unfortunately both were too ambitious for their station in life and were always longing for luxuries they had not the means to possess. Scheffer wished his wife to go into the best society, to be the most envied there for her grace and beauty; he sighed to give her the setting such a jewel demanded. And she, on her side, suffered to see her husband, whom she believed to be the most capable of men, doomed to labor ignominiously for a mere living.

This was the idyl. Now for the

So several months went on.

> But suppose Mina Weser were to take it into her head to get married? This dire thought took complete possession of Scheffer and his wife, who trembled at the idea of this magnificent fortune escaping them. What, in the name of everything, could they do to prevent this?

> The girl's millions were the tempter; the crime soon followed. It hinted itself; it was scouted with horror. It came again, and the erstwhile happy couple could not look one another in the face without seeing the foul thought there. It was fate. It must be done. But how without arousing suspicion?

An inspiration came to Mme. Scheffer. She made a discovery. She twined her arms around her hand- with us upon these questions would of the Republic. The plot then came readily enough, and a most diabolical one it was They would take advantage of this imprudent passion. But how? Well, Mine. Scheffer should disappear, be reported dead and her husband would marry the girl. Then

Then he would slowly poison her, after which Mme. Scheffer would return to her husband to enjoy the love of their youth in the heart of luxury. It took a long time to plan the simulated death—a longer one than the real one which was to follow. But Mme. Scheffer went to visit come friends. While there an accident occurred on a local railway, in which several people were killed. She heard of it, telegraphed her husband that had started by that train and hurried to Havre. She came to peacefully away at the hour above America, and lived for a time in

Meantime search was made at the scene of the railroad accident for her remains. They could not be identified, but the telegram proved that she was one of the killed.

Scheffer was a widower for a little less than the customary period and then married Miss Mina Weser. She was madly in love with him, and he simulated a similar passion in return. At the same time he was carrying out the preconcerted plot of slowly poisoning her, and hoped to join, with her wealth, his first wife in the New

This simulated passion, however, became too much for him. The passion became real, and the thought of losing his Mina became death to him. He sent to Coblenz, to Berlin even, for physicians to remedy the effects upon her of the poison he had administered. He signored his criminal promise. The girl recovered, and in is happiness he forgot it. But Mrs. Scheffer did not. She often went to the general delivery for the letter that never came. A year passed and no news of Mina's death. She could contain herself no longer; she went to Europe. When she found the true state of the case she partially lost her reason. Maddened by jealousy, she told of the whole plot. Scheffer was arrested, tried and convicted on the double charge of attempted murder and bigamy.

HARRISON'S POLICY.

HE SPEAKS OF HIS ATTITUDE TOWARD THE SOUTH.

AND SAYS THAT THE POLICIES OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY ARE WHOLES ME FOR THE WHOLE CUNTER AND THE SOUTHERN PEOPLE BHOULD ACT IN ACCORD WITH THEM.

By Telegraph to the News and Observer. GREENVILLE, S. O., Nov. 27. -The Greenville Daily News today prints a letter recently received by its - liter from Gen. Harrison and published by his permission. It was written in reply to a letter urging that Southern commercial interests should be re lieved from the obstruction caused by doubts and fears regarding the Southern policy of the incoming administration if Gen. Harrison would make general assurance of his purpose to follow a conservative course towards the South, and he replied as follows:

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 14, 1888. To A. B. Williams, Esq., Greenville: My DEAR SIR: Your letter of November 10th has been received. I am not ready to make any public speak upon this subject or that but I have invariably declined and to your appeal for some expression upon the question that interests you, I must for the present make the same answer. I understand that you have yourself been satisfied with the expressions made by me in my public utterances to visiting delegations during the campaign. When the surprise and disappointment which some of your people have felt over the result has passed away, and they give some calm thought to the situation, I think they will be as much surprised as I am that they should, in thought or speech, impute a tone of unfriendliness toward the South. The policies in legislation advised by the republican party, I believe, are wholesome for the whole country, and if those who, in their hearts, believe soon themselves disappear.
