EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

CLINTON, N. C., Nov. 30, 1874.

The Sampson Agricultural Fair here last week was well attended, and is equally prominent among the Fairs of the State as heretofore.

There were splendid specimens of cotton, to show the greatly improved varieties now used by these farmers, and full developed stalks, that proved the immense yield their cotton is capable of.

Some 1,025 articles were on exhibition, and the total receipts from tickets and entries were equal to former Fairs, and ample for all expenses.

A large number of citizens from Fayetteville and Cumberland came to the Fair, and brought many articles for exhibition also.

intention is then to carry out that purpose just as soon as means and opportunity allow. But anyhow, this money is my earnings, and I want it and deserve it.

At Raleigh I found the Legislature working in ease and harmony. It is to be hoped their session will be short and their work effective.

Sampson will raise as much cotton this year or more than ever before—perhaps four thousand bales. It is said Duplin will raise over five thousand bales this crop.

It is now said this company will make effort to extend their road on from Shelby by Asheville to Wolf Creek, Tenn., and if possible connect with Cincinnati.

The National Currency will engage the attention of Congress, and many changes are suggested. The more Northern and Eastern States, where most of the money and factories are located, seem to want our paper money contracted, or lessened in quantity, and put nearer on a specie basis.

The South has an impatient desire for more money or some representative of money to be more widely and rapidly circulated.
